Loyalists Ask Concessions For Dropping Reprisal Plan

Concessions Sought.

By the Associated Press

Paris, June 26.—The Spanish government has offered to abandon the thought of bombing Italian and German cities, in return for three concessions from France and Britain, a reliable diplomatic informant disclosed today.

[Alicante was raided again today by insurgent bombing planes but no casualties were reported—in contrast to an attack yesterday in which 100 persons were killed and more than 230 injured. Both attacks were regarded as insurgent defiance of the loyalist threat to bomb Italian and German cities.

Four Junkers Drop Bombs.

[Four German Junkers planes dropped several bombs in the port district of Alicante. Although some explosives fell in the harbor none of three British ships there was hit.—Editor's note.]

The conditions for giving up a plan for reprisals against insurgent air raids, unlikely to be agreed to by Britain and France, were listed as:

That France reopen the Pyrenees frontier to arms and munitions for Spanish government armies.

That France and Britain force Spanish insurgents to halt bombardment of government cities, in which many civilians have been killed.

That France and Britain agree to impose eventual mediation of the conflict upon Gen. Franco, who has Italian and German support.

An Effort to Bargain.

Diplomats, doubting such conditions would be received favorably by France and Britain, were inclined to believe now the Barcelona threats of reprisal bombings were for bargaining and not intended as a serious project.

France and Spain kept in close touch today. Foreign Minister Bonnet and British Premier Chamberlain, it was ascertained, asked Premier Mussolini to put pressure on his Spanish insurgent friends to end bombing of civilian centers.

The Franco-British statesmen agreed also to hurry establishment of a neutral commission to fix the blame in the Spanish air raids.

Charge Ships Plane Bases.

Barcelona, June 26 (AP).—A Spanish government authority today accused Italian or German warships of catapulting bombing planes into the air off the east coast to raid Spanish government cities.

A high official of the government's air force declared evidence had been found that a number of recent raids on coastal cities, with great loss of life resulting, had been executed by "foreign" planes shot out from warships of Fascist powers.

Du Pont Host to President; Delaware Marks First Swedish Colony.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., June 26.—President Roosevelt arrived here at 5 p. m. today to spend the night with the Eugene du Ponts and to speak tomorrow at the 300th anniversary of the landing of Swedish colonists in Delaware.

It was on June 30 last year that President Roosevelt first visited the du Pont home for the reception following the wedding of his son, Franklin, jr., to the former Ethel du Pont, daughter of the host.

The President's return to the du Pont home was in response to a cordial invitation from his host a year ago—an invitation which included the admonition, "Next time bring your white flannels."

It was practically certain the white flannels were packed in the President's baggage on this visit. But whether he would have an opportunity to wear them because of his heavy formal schedule was a question.

One military aide, Col. E. M. Watson, stayed with the Chief Executive on his overnight stop. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., and his wife were not there. White House aides said they still were at Hyde Park, the Roosevelt family home, where they went immediately after the wedding of the President's youngest son, John, at Nahant, Mass.

Tomorrow morning the President will be driven from the du Pont

'Invisible' Planes War On Japanese

Chinese Say 12 of Foe's Bombers Destroyed in Raid on Base.

By the United Press.

Shanghai, (Monday) June 27.—Both Chinese and Japanese claimed victory today in "one of the greatest aerial battles of the war" fought Sunday over the Kiukiang-Nanchang Railway, defending the southwestern approaches to China's provisional capital in Hankow.

A Japanese spokesman here said the battle was marked by the use of "invisible planes" newly arrived in China from Russia. These planes, he said, were able to drop bombs "without being seen."

The Chinese claimed five Japanese bombers were shot down near Kiukiang while bombing barricades the Chinese have built across the Yangtze River near Matang.

Meanwhile the "invisible planes" bombed the big Japanese airdromes near Anking, capital of Anhwei Province and the base of the Japanese drive on Hankow, destroying 12 Japanese bombers, a Chinese spokesman said.

Three Japanese Ships Disabled.

"Later these planes disabled three Japanese warships anchored in the Yangtze off Anking and shot down several Japanese planes near Wuhu (farther downstream near Nanking)," he added.

A Japanese naval spokesman in Shanghai said:

"Our navy and army planes in successive raids on the big Chinese airdrome at Nanchang shot down or destroyed on the ground a total of 35 of 50 Chinese planes encountered. It was one of the most signal air victories of the war. There were furious dog fights at altitudes as low as 1,500 feet.

"Our fliers were led by a 'suicide squadron,' which accounted for 12 Chinese planes and reported three more 'probably disabled.'

"By last evening the Chinese air force had been routed from Nanchang and our planes were able to land at the Nonchong airdrome.

"The air battles were the largest since those at Hankow on April 29 in which more than 150 planes were engaged.

"All the Chinese pursuit planes we shot down, when examined later, proved to be of Soviet-Russian make.

Massie Slap Denied.

He said the noise of the engines could be heard and the effects of their bombs were apparent, but that they could not be seen.

A Chinese war office spokesman in Hankow said he was informed the Japanese had declared martial law in the Manchukuo city of Harbin and the Japanese had recalled 14,000 of their best troops from North China into Manchukuo during the past week.

A Japanese spokesman here denied reports a Japanese sentry in Tsingtao had slapped the face of Mrs. Florence Storms Massie, of Chewelsh, Wash., wife of Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N., of the gunboat Tulsa. Americans reaching here from Tsingtao, however, gave this version:

Mrs. Massie, accompanied by two American sailors, went ashore in Tsingtao after a dinner party on the U. S. S. Tulsa and encountered a Japanese sentry, who slapped her apparently without reason.

When the sailors told the sentry that Mrs. Massie is the wife of an American naval officer, the sentry apologized profusely and attempted to shake hands with the Americans, who refused.

[The Chinese Embassy in Washington released a dispatch from Hankow today saying Chinese forces routed 6,000 Japanese soldiers at Hsiangkow in a four-hour battle, killing 4,000.—Editor's note.]

Farmer Hears Own 'Funeral' Preached Over Coffin He Built

By the Associated Press.

Kingston, Tenn., June 26.—Be-whiskered Felix (Bush) Breazeale—who wanted "to hear what the preacher says about me"—sat happily beside his handmade coffin today while a minister eulogized him in a lengthy "funeral" sermon.

"It was the nicest funeral I ever heard," the 74-year-old Roane County farmer said. "When I die there won't be another one. This was my last funeral and I'm mighty well pleased."

While the Rev. Charles E. Jackson, of Paris, Ill., praised the manifold merits of "Uncle Bush," a crowd estimated at more than 8,000 swarmed over the peaceful little Cave Creek valley grove which Breazeale had chosen for his obsequies.

For more than three hours after he had been consigned to his maker, the hearty old farmer stood beside the coffin he hewed from a walnut log and shook hands with hundreds. He "autographed" scores of cards and papers with the scrawled "X" that is his signature.

Breazeale, dressed in new suit and hat, rode to the grove in a hearse that called for him at the little farm home where he lives alone.

Who's Financing Roosevelt's Trip?

HAMILTON

This question was an irksome one yesterday to John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee. In a statement on the President's "fireside chat," Hamilton said:

"Since Mr. Roosevelt is intervening in Democratic primary fights as 'head of the Democratic Party' and not as President, it is to be hoped that the expenses of his tour next month across the country in behalf of Democrats whose candidacies he favors will be paid by the Democratic National Committee and not by the Federal Treasury."

Hamilton Hits 'Liberal' Plea As Distortion

Points to G. O. P. Antitrust Platform as Proof of Progressive Aims.

By the United Press.

John D. M. Hamilton, chairman, of the Republican National Committee, last night challenged President Roosevelt's fire-side chat description of "liberals" and "conservatives," and acused him of "distorting" the character of opposition to New Deal policies.

He said Republicans had not opposed social security, old-age benefits, regulation of the stock market and other similar reforms but had fought to improve these undertakings and to make them more workable. He pointed to the strong anti-monopoly stand taken by the G. O. P. in its 1936 platform and asked what the Roosevelt Administration had done, beyond talking, to curb monopolistic practices.

Hamilton denied the President's interpretation that conservatives were averse to meeting new problems and that they wished to live under conditions of the twenties. Instead, he said, they "wish to meet the problems of today in the light of the practical experience of mankind and within the framework of the American Constitution and form of government."

"A conservative knows by mankind's experience that one stepping out of a six-story window will fall to the ground," he explained. "A New Dealer stubbornly insists that such a person will ascend to the skies because he proposes to repeal the law of gravity."

Accusing the President of being "grossly misinformed" about the views of New Deal foes, Hamilton criticized the Chief Executive's an-

Mexico Cancels Oil Bond Issue For Indemnities

Mexico City, June 26 (U.P.).—The office of President Cardenas announced tonight the President had decided to suspend issuance of a 100,000,000 pesos (approximately $22,250,000) bond issue authorized by a special session of congress to raise funds for indemnification of expropriated foreign oil properties.

The action signified Mexico's original scheme for raising money to pay for the oil properties had been abandoned.

The announcement said the decision was reached after Cardenas conferred with the Secretaries of Finance, National Economy, Agriculture and Foreign Affairs as well as petroleum authorities, today at Barra de Tuxpan, State of Vera Cruz.

Altered Code Spurs Long Bank Loans

Liberalized Regulation Is Announced by Morgenthau.

2-Point Program Aims to Help Business in Borrowing.

A two-point program intended to encourage intermediate and long-term loans to business is incorporated in a new uniform bank examination code and revised national bank investment regulations, announced yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. The new liberal procedure, approved by President Roosevelt, will become effective July 1.

Under the new uniform bank examination code all insured banks in the United States will be examined by a common yardstick. This is the first time in the history of Federal bank supervision that all Government agencies interested in banks have agreed upon a uniform examination procedure.

Liberalization of regulations of the office of Comptroller of the Currency governing security purchases by national banks, in such a way as to encourage intermediate and long-term loans to business.

Eccles Wins Point.

Changes in bank examination procedure designed to remove any restrictions on bank lending owing to present requirements and also to foster long-term loans to business generally.

The investment securities regulations, issued by the Comptroller of the Currency, disclose that Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, won an important concession from the inter-departmental group which drew up the report, because banks are now granted permission to finance small business.

Eccles, in his letter to Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, pointed out that small business was not obtaining the capital it needed because of stringent bank regulations and the securities act of 1935, which required that securities sold in interstate commerce must be registered.

Captions Abandoned.

Under the revised procedure, banks are permitted to purchase local securities, having a ten-year to fifteen-year maturity, if they meet the following requirements:

"The debt evidenced thereby must mature not later than ten years after the date of issuance of the security and must be of such sound value or so secured as reasonably to assure its payment and such securities must, by their terms, provide for the amortization of the debt evidenced thereby so that at least 75 per cent of the principal will be extinguished by the maturity date by substantial periodic payments: provided, that no amortization need be required for the period of the first year after the date of issuance of such securities."

The loan procedure abandons the present captions of "Slow," "Doubtful" and "Loss," and substitutes

Toy Balloon Blast, Panic Injure 100 French Children

Versailles, France, June 26 (AP).—More than 100 children were injured today when a stand selling toy balloons caught fire.

The children were burned about the face and trampled on the ground in panic which followed an explosion of the balloons which set fire to the stand.

First reports from hospitals were that none was critically injured, but face and body burns were painful.

A thousand children and their parents had assembled on the main streets where booths were set up as part of a celebration in honor of Lazare Hoche, one of Napoleon's generals.

Spend Night Struggling in Chesapeake Bay After Losing Oar; Third Man Taken Off Leaky Craft as Day Breaks.

Three Arlington men were rescued from Chesapeake Bay yesterday after two of them, clinging to life preservers, had floundered in choppy waters more than ten hours through the night. The third was found helplessly drifting about the bay in a disabled outboard motorboat.

Richard D. Sebastian, 20, of 3112 First Road north, and Joseph Ambrogi, 28, of 2729 North Washington boulevard, were pulled out of the bay 7 miles from shore by a schooner loaded with Washington Girl Scouts, while Leonard Sebastian, 38, a brother of Richard, was saved by another craft several miles away.

Still shaken by their harrowing experience and hoarse from vainly shouting at passing boats all night long, the three men yesterday described their adventure.

"We had been out fishing and were returning to Plum Point, Md., in our hired boat when the motor broke down," Leonard Sebastian said. "The wind was blowing strong and I started to row for shore

Two Gunmen Shoot Officer, Kidnap Pair

State Policeman Wounded When He Offers Help to Stalled Cars.

By the Associated Press.

Laporte, Ind., June 26.—Two heavily armed gunmen critically wounded State Policeman Ray Dixon, 29, of South Bend, Ind., near here tonight, kidnaped Deputy Sheriffs Charles Hahn, about 50, and Joe Kowalczyk, about 40, and escaped in the latter officers' automobile.

Sheriff Joseph Wolf said Dixon was wounded three times in the stomach and in the hand. Physicians said a blood transfusion might be necessary to save him.

The shooting occurred soon after R. J. Hennings, South Bend newspaper photographer, and Dixon left South Bend to investigate an automobile accident in which two persons were hurt. Dixon arrested Walter Sanders, 22, of Michigan City, and, with Hennings, placed Sanders in their car and started to Laporte.

The sheriff said Dixon noticed a sedan parked in the county road, stopped and asked the two occupants "What's the trouble?"

Dixon started over to offer assistance, and without warning the

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 26.—Another fruitless day of search for Medill McCormick, 21, publishing family scion, was concluded tonight as the rocky heights of Sandia Peak for the third successive day mocked efforts of scores of searchers to learn his fate.

Nearly 350 men, including some of the finest mountain climbing talent in the Rockies, were baffled by the boy's whereabouts, or whether he was dead or alive.

The search was spurred briefly late in the day by a report that what appeared to be McCormick's body had been sighted on the high face of the peak. It appeared another of many false alarms, as a search party was seen through powerful glasses to have reached the spot in question and go on down the peak.

The spot was approximately 700 feet above the rocks where the battered body of Richard Whitmer, young McCormick's companion, was found late Friday.

The New Mexico sky augured more rain and real peril to climbers. The searchers were

Senor Don Hector Diaz Leguizamon, first secretary of the Argentine Embassy, died of a heart attack Saturday night after a dinner given for a wedding party by Francis Bennett Poe, 3337 P street northwest.

LEGUIZAMON

The 46-year-old diplomat, one of Washington's popular bachelors, was to have been an usher Wednesday at the marriage of Miss Margo Garrett, local social leader, and Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler, second secretary of the embassy. The dinner, given in honor of Zuberbuhler, was one of many events leading up to the fashionable wedding.

He is said to have complained of feeling sleepy while the party was in progress and to have gone to a bedroom to rest. Found still asleep when the party broke up, his host decided not to awaken him. He was dead in the morning.

WPA Raises Pay in South For 500,000 in Low Brackets

'Still Inadequate,' Says Hopkins; $1 Is Daily Minimum Rate.

By the United Press.

Works Progress Administrator Hopkins last night announced wage increases affecting 500,000 unskilled WPA workers in 13 Southern States.

Hopkins said the action was taken at the direction of President Roosevelt and was pursuant "to a general Administration policy of bringing the income levels of the lowest paid workers of the South more nearly in line with the income levels of such workers in other parts of the country."

The action follows by two weeks adoption by Congress of a national wage-hour bill which conservative Southern Democrats fought until wage differentials and exemptions were granted their industries. One of their chief arguments was that the WPA itself paid less in the South than in the North.

All Workers in 4 States.

While the wage-hour measure still was pending Mr. Roosevelt invaded the deep South, and in strong language told an audience at Gainesville, Ga., that prosperity would be delayed so long as Southern industrialists paid their workers a bare living wage. Hopkins said the hike would increase the Southern relief worker's pay by about $5 a month.

Officials pointed out that because of cheaper living conditions in the South the WPA wage level still remained lower than those in the North and West, despite the increase. An accurate comparison of average wage levels in the three sections was not possible immediately.

States affected are North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

The major increase affects unskilled workers but, in four States—Virginia, Oklahoma, North Carolina and Kentucky—adjustments were made in the monthly security wages of all WPA workers.

"This wage scale means that no one who works in the WPA will receive less than $1 a day in any region," Hopkins said.

"We have felt for some time that our security wages in certain areas of the country were based on a standard of living below the levels of health and decency and did not bear sufficiently realistic relationship to the actual cost of living. The new minimum wage rates, created for these half-million workers receiving the lowest monthly security wages, while still inadequate in my judgment, give these people something nearer to an income which will assure a minimum standard of living.

N. Y. C. White Collar Rate Up.

"We have also believed that with the apparent beginnings of an upturn in business, this is a particularly advantageous time to accelerate that upturn by creating additional purchasing power in the lower brackets."

The WPA administrator also announced a new rate of $98.70 a month for higher paid professional and technical workers in New York City, which he said was effected on the basis of a higher cost of living. The limit of this bracket for the Northern and Western areas, with the exception of New York, is $94.

The official announcement came a few hours after David Lasser, Workers' Alliance president, said Hopkins and Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams had agreed to hike Southern wages $5 to $11 monthly in response to demands of his organization.

Lasser said the officials also agreed to rescind a rule imposing

Martin Warns Labor Against Alien Interests

By Paul Tobenkin.

Camp Tamiment, Pa., June 26.—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, warned today that there was no place in the ranks of organized labor for those who placed extremist or alien causes above the welfare of the labor movement. He indicated he would carry to a finish his fight against five suspended officers of the automobile union.

Martin said that of 500 locals of the unoin only 12 had expressed support for the ousted union officials. His statement that he would continue the fight against these officers definitely spiked rumors that pressure by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and rank and file pressure had forced Martin to consider reinstating the suspended persons. The five suspended officers are to be tried by the executive board of the union.

Dr. Steelman Speaks.

Martin spoke at the concluding day of the fourth annual Tamiment Economic and Social Institute. Other speakers today were Dr. John E. Steelman, director of conciliation of the United States Department of Labor, and Prof. Samuel M. Lindsay, of Columbia University, chairman of the American Committee of the International Labor Office.

There were two indications at today's session that the internecine warfare in the ranks of labor was becoming somewhat less acrimonious.

Martin, whose union is one of the largest affiliates of the Committee for Industrial Organization, said his organization has been and would continue to co-operate in every way with the rank and file of the American Federation of Labor. He said the automobile workers had aided in the organization of hundreds of thousands of workers and turned them over to A. F. of L. unions in whose jurisdiction they belonged.

It was this increasing sentiment on the part of the rank and file of both factions, he said, that would eventually bring unity.

Says Bitterness on Wane.

Dr. Steelman, in one of the rare pronouncements by a Government official on labor's internal war, said that although the battle was based on fundamental differences as well as on personal disagreement, the extreme bitterness which the fight engendered was, in general, waning.

"The A. F. of L.-C. I. O. fight is fundamental as well as personal," Dr. Steelman said. "Due to forces which no individual can now control, it will be some time before the split is entirely healed. Meantime, extreme bitterness is generally waning. There are, of course, exceptions — harmful exceptions—where extreme individuals do injury, and embarrass not only their own union but the labor movement in general.

"It would be to the advantage of labor as a whole as well as to industry and the public if the feud were brought to the speediest possible conclusion."

Definite Policy Urged.

Dr. Lindsay said American recovery must be adjusted to present world-wide conditions and must produce an economic machine capable of readjustment to new and changing relationships in prices, profits, wages and working conditions in various countries.

Such recovery, he said, could be promoted further by American participation in activities of the International Labor Office.

"The first requisite for the company or industry desiring to follow the path of progress is that it shall have a definite constructive policy in the matter of its industrial relations, just as it has definite commercial and technical policies," Dr. Steelman said.

"It should be understood, once and for all, that the stockholder's money is not protected to the fullest advantage unless the labor relations of the company are on a sound basis! The first step in the direction of a sound labor policy must be to improve channels for collective communications between management and workers. What I desire to see is that properly elected representatives of the workers shall meet appointed representatives of the management regularly to discuss not only controversial subjects and grievances but matters of common interest."

Educators Urge Party Oust Hague

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 26.—A demand that President Roosevelt, in his speech to the National Education Association on Thursday, request the resignation of Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, as vice chairman of the National Democratic Committee, was made this morning, at a meeting of the association's national council of education, at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

The demand was made by Alonzo F. Myers, professor of education at the New York University School of Education. The council was holding its annual meeting, which precedes the first session tomorrow of the association's convention.

Rabbis Condemn Arms Spending

Atlantic City, N. J., June 26 (AP).—A resolution condemning the United States Government's "vast and ill-advised" expenditures for armaments and urging a national defense policy limited to defense of shores against invasion was adopted by the central conference of American Rabbis today at the end of its forty-ninth annual convention.

Two hundred "liberal" rabbis from all sections of the United States adopted the resolution which also "repudiated this policy of false prosperity through armaments" and indorsed a policy of "sound prosperity" based on a program of housing, public works, conservation of natural resources, expanded education and improved health services.

By Christine Sadler

Fires that start in fire-proof buildings are the toughest jobs District firemen have to face, in the opinion of Fire Chief Charles Edward Schrom, a Washington fire-fighter for 46 years and now serving his fifth year as chief.

"There's really no such thing as a fireproof building," declares Chief Schrom, who considers the hardest work he ever did the 12 hours he put in two years ago trying to put out a fire on the sixth floor of the "new fireproof Postoffice Building."

The Fire Department consists of 30 engine companies, 15 truck companies, 2 rescue squads, and a fire boat company. The fire fighting force totals 888 men. During the depression 15 were clipped off and have never been reinstated.

Of 5,676 fire alarms sounded in the city last year, only 3,784 represented fires worth fighting, and only 31 fires had to have multiple alarms.

Chief Schrom would like to see a truck company in Anacostia and an engine company in the Wesley Heights area. Also he would like to put his men on a three-shift day.

District firemen now work in two shifts, putting in 10 hours a day during the week they work the day shift and 14 hours a night durnig the week they are on the night shift.

"Very few cities have been able to put in the three shifts yet. It would require 528 additional men and cost the District a little more than $1,000,000 the first year to put the department on the eight-hour day," Chief Schrom says.

The Fire Department, started on a paid basis in 1870, covers the "metropolitan area," which gives it a 12-mile radius of operation. Few calls come from outside the District, however, as nearby communities take great pride in their own fire set-ups and call in the Capital force only when a real fire is under way.

Vacancies in the deparment average 30 and 35 men a year. The department is under civil service and the last time physical examinations were held more than 1,100 passed.

A native of York, Pa., Chief Schrom came to Washington in 1890 and after two years of residence was admitted to the Fire Department as a substitute. In 1904 he was elevated to a captaincy. He was made battalion chief in 1921, deputy chief engineer in 1931, and chief in 1933.

On Wednesday—Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, the District's most "titled" official, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

800 Workers Plan To Bring Praise, Not Pleas, to WPA

The purpose of a workers' conference scheduled here today to "save professional WPA projects" appeared to be achieved in advance last night when President David Lasser of the Workers Alliance of America, announced results of a conference with Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams. According to Lasser, Williams gave him assurance yesterday that the $1,000 man-year" ruling, to which the Workers Alliance objects, has been rescinded.

The ruling, to take effect Saturday, would cut wages up to 20 per cent in some professional WPA projects and would close others, according to Workers Alliance leaders. Williams told Lasser yesterday professional projects would not be endangered and low-paid WPA workers in the South would receive increases of $5 to $11 a month.

The conference will be held as scheduled, Lasser added, since most of the 800 delegates already are on their way here, but instead of protesting, they will praise administration of WPA and will map a program for future action.

Jobless Census Shows Shortage Of Skilled Help

By the Associated Press.

Director John D. Biggers yesterday said his unemployment census showed that "the hardships of unemployment fall more heavily upon the unskilled workman than upon the skilled, trained workman." He urged more vocational training efforts.

Although only 42 per cent of the male jobless registered in last November's postcard survey were classified as unskilled, Biggers said this was out of proportion to 1930 census figures showing that only 27 per cent of the men workers were unskilled.

He added that "if, as is indicated, the developments in industry call for workmen of higher skills, the obvious demand is to give more attention to proper vocational training so that the Nation may be able to utilize more easily these unemployed workmen."

Rural Power Held Farm, Industry Aid by Carmody

Brownstown, Ind., June 26 (AP).—John J. Carmody, of Washington, rural electrification administrator, told farmers at the energizing of a new "yardstick" electrification system here today benefits of such projects were not confined to rural districts.

"Rural-line building means vast new markets for industry and increased opportunity for labor," he said, declaring farmers usually matched every REA dollar in electrical equipment purchases. The system is the first of three United States experiments in cheap farm lighting.

Instead of paying a private contractor to build lines, the Jackson County Rural Electric Membership Corporation hired labor, got its own materials and bought poles off nearby farms. Government engineers oversaw the work. Seventy-three miles of line were energized. Eventually there will be 300 miles serving 1,300 consumers in three counties.

Rail Wage Cut Is No Solution, LaGuardia Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 26.—Mayor LaGuardia said today a "major operation" would have to be performed on the Nation's railroads. He told a mass meeting of 2,500 members of 21 railroad unions, including the four major independent brotherhoods, in Manhattan Opera House here that the 15 per cent wage reduction which the railroads have announced for July 1 would not solve the problem.

"I'm not as alarmed as perhaps some of you are that there's going to be wage reduction," the mayor said, explaining that under the railway labor act the dispute would have to go before a mediation board if negotiations between the lines and unions were fruitless.

Court Fight Seen.

However, some of the speakers said they believed the railroads, or a group of them, would effect the pay cut and try to fight it out in the courts. Their concern was reflected in a resolution, passed by acclamation, in which the union leaders were advised "that we are ready and willing to strike, rather than submit to any wage reductions whatsover."

J. R. Abbott, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks, who presided, said that this was as near to a strike vote as it could be.

The union leaders will be in Chicago today and tomorrow, it was brought out, to confer with the carriers about the 15 per cent cut, which the committee announced on May 12, effective July 1. The railway labor act provides for conferences within 30 days after notification, followed by intervention of the National Mediation Board, arbitration, and, as a last resort, appointment by the President of a special fact-finding board. During these stages there can be neither walkout nor change in wages.

Worried Over Strike.

Although he declared the wage reduction was unlikely, not only because of the railway labor act but because it would antagonize public opinion, Mayor LaGuardia seemed worried about the strike which would follow it.

"I have a town here of 7,000,000 people, just a railroad town," he said. "I can't raise wheat on the sidewalks of New York, or graze enough cows in Central Park to feed the city. But I must feed this town. If there will be an interruption in services, I want you boys to tell me about it, and we will sit down together and find some way of bringing food into the city of New York."

The mayor said he had a plan worked out for short hauls, in case of a strike, and could develop one for long hauls. He said he appreciated the willingness of the unions to co-operate. As he left, applauded with little of the cheering and whistling which had greeted his entrance, Abbott said that the unions would certainly co-operate, and asked whether the mayor, in case of a strike, would prevent interference by police and strike breakers. The mayor had left, however, and couldn't answer.

Schoolboys Build Plane, Set Mark

New Orleans, June 26 (AP).—A racing monoplane built by students of the Delgado Trades School here was clocked today in a new world speed record for planes of its type. It was piloted by Clarence McArthur, of Charlotte, N. C.

Charles S. Logsdon, of Washington, assistant secretary of the National Aeronautics Association, official time checker, said the speed over a 100-kilometer course was 207.027 miles per hour.

The world record for single-seat planes not exceeding 549-cubic inch piston displacement, was set in December, 1937, by Maurice Arnoux in France. Logsdon said Arnoux's speed was 206.131.

New Deal Aids Nye in Dakota Primary Race

By the Associated Press.

Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, opposes Gov. Langer of that State tomorrow in Republican primaries under circumstances tending to give immediate meaning to President Roosevelt's homily on liberalism and conservatism.

Nye is carrying a sufficient showing of New Deal liberal colors in the race, despite his Republican rating, to make that figure in the voting. He bears the indorsement of Senator Bone, of Washington (Democrat), and Senator Norris, of Nebraska, independent New Dealer, as a proven liberal.

Coming so closely after the President's appeal to voters in all parties to weigh liberal versus conservative records of primary candidates, the Nye-Langer contest will be scanned in Washington for whatever reflection may be found in it of Roosevelt influence on Republican voters in North Dakota.

Speech May Help Nye.

The President's simplification of the 1938 campaigns into liberals versus conservatives and the emphasis he placed on his definition of what constituted a liberal or a conservative, came when it might help Nye. Nye has been a frequent member of the New Deal coalition in Congress with Midwest Progressives and Independents and Northwestern Farmer-Laborites to back Roosevelt measures in these six New Deal years.

At the time of the Bone and Norris praise of Nye, there were suggestions that even more direct intimations of New Deal favor might come. Other circumstances, including the fact that Congress had adjourned and his own crowded traveling and speaking program for the weeks between now and mid-July, dictated the timing of Mr. Roosevelt's broadcast. That it might incidentally furnish Nye supporters in North Dakota with fresh ammunition in his renomination race, however, is a circumstance that probably caused no regrets at the White House.

Nye's Republican irregularity has been marked from his first appearance in the Senate in the middle 20's, by appointment. The Republican Old Guard fought him and then he was seated through help of Democratic votes. As evidence of his disfavor, his first seat was assigned on the Democratic side of the center aisle on a plea of crowded Republican ranks.

Easily Re-elected.

That and other things helped Nye to an impressive re-election amidst the first Roosevelt sweep to the White House in 1932. He polled then the biggest vote North Dakota has ever given any major candidate, State or Federal, except its showing for Roosevelt in 1936.

As a crusader for mandatory neutrality and backer of other peace moves not in accord with Roosevelt foreign policy, Nye has by no means been a 100 per cent New Dealer. Yet his renomination Tuesday with such suggestions of New Deal aid as have come to the surface of the news might serve White House purposes to point a valuable lesson to be drawn by New Deal disaffected Democrats from the President's disclosure of his plans for an active role in party primaries and the elections.

Canadian and U.S. Foreign Problems Declared Similar

Canadians were shown to be as deeply interested as Americans in the issue of neutrality versus collective action against international aggression, with their problems more complicated than those in this country, in a report by James Frederick Green, made public yesterday by the Foreign Policy Association.

"Proponents of a North American policy favor the adoption of neutrality legislation even more drastic than that of the United States," Green said. "The Dominion, which could probably remain aloof from brief or localized disturbances as it has in the past, would almost inevitably become involved in any prolonged or general conflict in which Britain's safety was threatened."

Grade Crossing Crashes Kill 362 So Far in '38

A total of 362 persons were killed at highway-railroad grade crossings in the first three months of this year—a decrease of 133 over last year—it was reported yesterday by the Association of American Railroads. Officials said the number of such accidents was only 933 this year, 366 less than in the same period last year.

Rugged individualists clashed yesterday when Billy Overton (right), invaded the corner where 340-pound Abe Miloff long has peddled ice cream bars, and cut Abe's price in half. "I'll freeze him out in a week," said Billy.

Bitter Price-Cutting Has Both Dealers Hoarse in Throat and Hot Under Collar—But, Oh, How the Nickels Roll in!

Abe Milloff, his 340 pounds quivering with indignation, explained last night that two days ago he stopped doing business with the firm which has supplied his ice cream for the past two years.

He was looking forward to a good day's business yesterday morning, as he shouted to all passers-by the virtues of his 5-cent ice cream bars, now purchased from another firm.

But the Sunday strollers had barely begun to give their custom, when a young man named Billy Overton set up shop 2 yards from Abe's usual station and stridently offered the same product at two for a nickel.

Overton said he works for the company which formerly sold ice cream to Abe and that "I'll freeze him out of this corner in two weeks."

Abe's robust figure heaved as he stated firmly that young Overton would do no such thing. Meanwhile the spirited exchanges between the two vendors attract so much attention that one cynic in the corner crowd suggested that both of them are enjoying more business together than they could apart.

Only Two of Horse Veterans Of A. E. F. Can Be Mustered

1,000 Civil War Men Will Salute Colors at Gettysburg, But Hundreds of Steeds That Served in France Have Passed to 'Green Pastures.'

By the United Press.

When the bugles blow at Gettysburg, Pa., this week more than 1,000 Civil War veterans will salute the colors, but last night no trumpet on earth could muster more than a handful of horses which served with the American Expeditionary Forces during the World War.

Even a handful is a high estimate. So far as Army records are concerned it would be difficult to find more than two—the famed Kidron and Jeff, which served as mounts for Gen. John J. Pershing. They are spending their declining days on a pension of oats and ease at picturesque Front Royal overlooking Virginia's Skyline Drive.

Army officials believe there may be one or two others somewhere in the country, but for the most part the hundreds which served with the Fifteenth and Third United States Cavalry in France either were blown to bits on the battlefield or died peacefully in retirement after the war. Death also has come to the many artillery horses which accompanied the United States Army.

Kidron, once the more famous of the Kidron-Jeff combination, served as a mount for Gen. Pershing during the stirring victory parade of the Allies in Paris in 1919. He is 29 years old today and his days are definitely numbered. But the fierce fighter in him stirs his pride and he stands stiff and straight, remembering the Arche de Triomphe.

First Lady Lets Miners Speak For Homestead

Arthurdale Residents Sing Project's Praise Before Newspapermen.

By the Associated Press.

Arthurdale, W. Va., June 26.—Five Arthurdale homesteaders interviewed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today, told 350 members of the National Editorial Association how moving to this Federal project from destitute circumstances in stranded coal mining areas has improved their economic status.

Instead of addressing the newspapermen and women upon their visit to this section in their six-day tour of West Virginia, Mrs. Roosevelt, who flew to Morgantown from Hyde Park confined her appearance before them to interviewing five men who have been residents of the homestead since early in it's history.

"I have been happier and more contented in the last four years than ever before in my life," said John Mason, 75-year-old former coal miner, homesteader since 1934. "Now I feel I've got a permanent home and the landlord can't tell me to get out."

"Finest Thing," They Say.

Clarence Degolyer, father of 11 children, D. D. Luzier, Ed Whittaker, and William McNellis reiterated Mason's statement that "Arthurdale has been the finest thing that has happened to any of us."

Mrs. Roosevelt interviewed the men at a luncheon in the Arthurdale School plant given for the N. E. A. members, who came here by special train. The First Lady was met at Morgantown by Bernard Baruch, New York financier, who came to Morgantown by train earlier in the day, and by Raymond Kenny, of the Social Security Board.

Recalls "Headaches."

Introducing the homesteaders she interviewed, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"This project was the first homestead. There were plenty of headaches encountered, but we were fortunate in having the co-operation of a number of men like Mr. Baruch, Mr. Pickett (Clarence E. Pickett, of the American Friends Society, who also was present), Mr. Kenny and others. The other projects have not been so fortunate and they need your interest and support."

The newspaper tourists continued their trip late today into the eastern Panhandle. Mrs. Roosevelt left also by plane.

Plane Forced Down.

Lancaster, Pa., June 26 (AP).—A plane carrying Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and a party from Arthurdale, W. Va., to Hyde Park, N. Y., landed unexpectedly at the airport here tonight because of an approaching storm.

With Mrs. Roosevelt were Bernard S. Baruch, New York financier; Dr. Lytell S. Adams, president of Tri-State Airlines, Morgantown, W. Va., and E. R. Miller, director of Federal prison personnel. They continued east by automobile and said they intended to take a train later for the remainder of the journey.

Educators See Schools Periled By Propaganda

New York, June 26.—A plea for decentralization of education as "a most effective means of guaranteeing freedom of speech and of discussion and of protecting the schools against the propaganda of any political group temporarily in control of the central government" was made tonight in the annual report of the Educational Policies Commission, policy-making body of the National Education Association. The report was submitted at one of the opening sessions of the association's seventy-sixth annual convention in the Hotel Pennsylvania.

While insisting the Federal Government must not attempt to control education, the report suggested Federal aid in larger amounts for backward or financially weak States. In addition the report emphasized the necessity of continuing education as a State function and came out bluntly against the use of tax monies for the support of parochial or private schools.

Fear Depression Tactics.

Decentralization, however, was the keynote of the 128-page report. Alexander J. Stoddard, chairman of the commission, who read the report, decried particularly the use of education as "the instrument used to regiment the thinking of the people" in totalitarian states. But the committee also found cause for suspicion in the depression tactics of the Federal government in giving large responsibility over the field of education to the Relief Administration.

Similarly the commission was skeptical of the activities of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration, insisting their educational work should be done in conjunction with the local school system. The report saw a definite danger otherwise of a new administrative authority being created, which would result in two systems of education developing in the United States, in violation of the national policy of decentralization.

Warn Against Federal System.

"In the totalitarian state," the report stated, "state education is the instrument used to regiment the thinking of the people. No longer is a search for truth encouraged. Propaganda which seeks to enlist the support of all of the people for the program of the dictator takes the place of education."

The United States, the commission held, should take advantage of its federation system to resist any centralization of control. A Federal system, the report warns, "might, through the determination of curriculums and the presentation of mass or partisan political propaganda, dominate or control the thinking of the people."

Only Few Remain Who Saw Capture Of Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., June 26 (AP).—The June days 75 years ago, when Federal and Confederate troops were converging on Gettysburg, brought no worries to most of Maryland. But it was a different story in this mountain town.

Now, when veterans of the two armies are again on their way to the seventy-fifth anniversary of the battle, there are a few left to remember that Cumberland had just been captured by Southern troops for the first time.

The captor was Col. G. W. Imboden, brother of Gen. Imboden, and commander of a detail of lean, hard-riding Confederate cavalry. They swept up through what is now West Virginia and the smoke curled up from burning railroad bridges at North Branch, Evitts Creek and Patterson Creek.

Virginia Reports A Fiscal Surplus; Twelfth on List

Richmond, June 26 (AP).—Among states from which data was available, Virginia ranked twelfth today in the size of its estimated surplus for the close of the current fiscal year.

However, some of the states above Virginia in respect to the size of the surplus had far larger public indebtedness.

The estimated Virginia surplus of $5,265,000 in the general fund was only slightly less than that of Iowa and Mississippi and more than $1,000,000 larger than Arkansas.

More than 100 cities are still to be heard from, the congress announced. The voting will continue through tomorrow.

nounced intention of entering primaries in the role of head of the Democratic Party to aid in carrying out his demand for a purge of political conservatives or "reactionaries."

"Mr. Roosevelt's attempt to divide himself miraculously into two separate and distinct personalities is so amusing as to bring to mind Pooh Bah, of Gilbert & Sullivan's "Mikado," who has delighted audiences for many years by his multiplicity of personalities," Hamilton said.

Who Pays for Trip?

Since the Chief Executive is to intervene in Democratic primary fights as head of his party and not as President, Hamilton hoped that the expenses of the forthcoming Presidential tour across the country would be paid by the Democratic National Committee and not by the Federal Treasury. He described as "an amazing and surprising development" the Chief Executive's avowed determination "to get a Congress of yes men."

While Hamilton was blasting away at the President, Representative Fish (Republican), New York, renewed his feud with the National Committee. He warned it would be "just one more political blunder on the part of the deplorable leadership of the Republican Party" if the executive committee of the National Committee, which meets here today, interfered with the conduct of the Republican Congressional elections committee.

He said ten new Republican Senators and at least 100 additional Republican Congressmen could be elected if the committee would turn over to the Congressional group "some of the money it is wasting." Fish suggested that the chairmanship of the National Committee be vacated until after the fall election to make sure that the group will keep hands off the Congressional campaigns.

Carolina Test Awaited.

Meanwhile, there appeared to be no opportunity to gauge the effect of Mr. Roosevelt's appeal for a purge of political conservatives until the South Carolina primary August 30. National interest in this balloting lies in the senatorial race between Senator Ellison D. Smith, anti-New Deal Democrat, and Gov. Olin D. Johnston, whose State administration has been a miniature New Deal and who has pledged 100 per cent support of the President's policies.

Johnston will have White House support, as will Lawrence Camp, who carries the Administration's colors in the Georgia Senatorial primary contest September 14. Camp's opponent is Senator Walter George, conservative anti-New Dealer. In the Maryland primary, the New Deal will back Representative David J. Lewis, long-time liberal, in the Senatorial race with Senator Millard Tydings, foe of most Administration reforms.

Primaries in other States during July and the early part of August are not involved in the clash between liberals and conservatives. In Kentucky, Gov. A. B. ("Happy") Chandler, who is trying to unseat Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, over the week-end pledged his support to the Administration. The President has indicated his favoritism for Barkley, however, and is expected to praise him in his Covington, Ky., speech.

The Administration is expected to keep hands-off the Missouri primary on August 2, because Senator Bennett C. Clark, an in-and-out New Dealer who fought the President's Supreme Court enlargement bill, is believed too firmly entrenched. Clark reiterated his right to independent action on New Deal legislation in a speech at Flat River, Mo., yesterday.

Yale Economist Urges War Debt TimeExtension

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press

New Haven, Conn., June 26.—Dr. Irving Fisher, professor of political economy at Yale, tonight proposed that this country "come as near cancellation of European war debts owed us as public opinion will permit."

On January 31, 1938, they totaled $12,493,067,660.86. All are in default except Finland, which owes only $8,350,481.

"I personally would not object to absolute cancellation," he said, "but from a practical viewpoint and taking into consideration both the action of Congress 16 years ago and public sentiment, which latter is the deciding factor, absolute cancellation is out.

"I suggest reducing or even abolishing interest and spreading payment of principal over at least 62 more years."

(Under the act of Congress of February, 1922, debtor nations were given 62 years in which to repay war loans.)

Public Opinion Cited.

"The only real obstacle to this is public opinion, which demands debt payment and, at the same time, retention of high tariff walls which will not permit payment in goods to any great degree," Dr. Fisher said.

"The chief advantage would be to get rid of a troublesome and hitherto insoluble problem, with all its uncertainty, misunderstanding and ill will. It might lead to something more important than itself by creating better understanding and help Secretary of State Cordell Hull in his endeavor to get the sanction of public opinion behind his reciprocal trade agreements. I quite agree with him that any stimulus to international trade is helpful to our domestic economy."

Hungary, whose original debt was $1,939,000 at the time of funding, last week offered to resume payments reducing the principal of interest were canceled. Years ago Fisher suggested a similar plan for all debtor nations owing the United States, his idea being to forego all interest and spread principal payments over 150 years.

Would Lower Tariff.

"This could be done with the big debtors also if our tariff walls were lowered," Fisher said. "The debts then could be paid without disrupting the economic stability of the countries concerned, but would be certain to raise a protest from American producers who feel that they need strong protection.

"If Europe is really to pay, we must let her export the goods to pay with. She could not pay much in gold, which we don't need, but we won't let her pay in goods. We have raised the tariff to prevent it. When we think in terms of money we want Europe to pay, but when we think in terms of goods we don't want her to pay.

"To be consistent we ought either to reduce the tariff and let her pay in the only way she can; or else if, as seems to be the case, we are bound she shall not pay in goods—the only way she can pay at all—then we ought to let her off from paying.

"To those who ask why should we pay what others owe, I reply we shall have to anyway. Besides all this, it will be to our advantage to let debtors off just as it is always to the advantage of the business world to let some people go through the bankruptcy court instead of keeping them in debt servitude all their lives. We need now to apply the same principle to intergovernmental debts.

"We are making 'much ado about nothing' so far as any important gain we can make out of debt payment is concerned, but politically it is a serious matter. Moreover one of the chief causes of this depression is too much debt, and to reduce the international debts will help us out of the depression."

Jefferson Davis Aide's Daughter Dies Here at 80

Surviving are a son, Charles Hoyle, of Etzatlan, Mexico; a daughter, Mrs. Mildred Hoyle Core, of Ford City, Pa., and four granddaughters, Mrs. Richard Ford, wife of the United States consul at Montreal; Mary and Natalie Hammond Core, of Ford City, and Ella C. Hoyle, of Washington.

Plans for funeral services were not complete last night.

400 Touring Editors Guests of Martinsburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 26.—Four hundred touring members of the National Editorial Association, taking a sightseeing trip in West Virginia, were in the Eastern Panhandle tonight.

Tomorrow they will make trips through Berkeley, Morgan and Jefferson counties to see historic spots and the industrial setup before returning here tomorrow evening to be guests at a dinner tendered by The Journal.

Nor would it hurt if a few publishers exercised a little self-discipline and indulged in a little soul-searching.

It would be enlightening, also, to discover what an analysis of 100 important newspapers would demonstrate about fairness in the news columns of the American press.

These three Arlington County, Va., men spent a harrowing 10 hours on stormy Chesapeake Bay Saturday night after they lost an oar from the boat in which they were fishing off Plum Point, Md. Left to right are Richard D. Sebastian, 20, who jumped overboard to take a life preserver to Joseph Ambrogi, 28, who had gone after the oar; Leonard C. Sebastian, 38, who spent the night helpless in the leaky boat, and Ambrogi.

Leaped From Boat.

Ambrogi leaped out of the boat to retrieve the oar. "I didn't have any idea the tide was so strong," he said. "But when I got in the water, I couldn't do a thing. The wind was blowing the boat northward, and the tide was carrying me the other direction, out to sea. So I hollered for help."

The Sebastian brothers threw him a life preserver, but were unable to reach him. Richard, who weighs 230 pounds, thereupon strapped a preserver on himself and jumped in to rescue his friend. He managed to push the other life preserver to Ambrogi, but neither was able to swim back to the windtossed boat.

The two men, bobbing up and down in cold bay waters, soon lost sight of their companion who was frantically attempting to guide his craft with one oar. Richard drifted 11 hours and Ambrogi 13 hours before rescue came.

"Within 15 minutes we were separated, too," Richard said, "and I didn't see Joe for the next 13 hours. We were first carried out by the ebb tide; then the tide changed and then, just before we were picked up, it was carrying us back up the bay. Of course, neither of us knew whether the other was dead or alive."

Yelled at Vessels.

Ambrogi added that "it wasn't so bad when dawn came; but, boy, it sure was tough floating around through the night. I had stripped to my shorts—and the water was cold. Dew fell and that was like ice. Lots of little boats passed by and I yelled as loudly as I could, but the noise of the motors drowned me out and nobody heard me."

Meanwhile, the elder Sebastian was floating about the bay in his one-oared boat. About 2:30 a. m., a motor cruiser which had been chartered by three men for a fishing party sighted him. "I yelled to them not to bother about me but to find my brother and Joe," Leonard said. The boat then swerved away.

At 3:30 a. m., Leonard, still bailing out water, was rescued by a motorboat driven by J. L. Windsor, of Deal Beach, Md. Sebastian had been drifting about seven hours.

85-Cent Preservers.

Supported by their 85-cent aircushion life-preservers, Richard Sebastian and Ambrogi were swept about 15 miles down Chesapeake Bay from the point where they jumped overboard. They were carried by the tide against fishing-net poles, but were unable to hold on against the force of the water.

Finally, after 11 hours, Richard's shouts were answered by the schooner William J. Stanford, out of Annapolis. The ship, under command of Capt. L. T. Kelly, was carrying a party of Mariners of Washington, a Girl Sea Scout organization.

"My arms were like jelly," Richard said. "I couldn't hold on so they had to haul me up by passing a rope around me."

Young Sebastian was rescued in the middle of the Bay. Almost incoherent, he told Capt. Kelly that Ambrogi must be somewhere in the vicinity. After two hours' search, Ambrogi was sighted and hauled on board. The two were brought back to Plum Point, where they met Leonard in a semi-hyterical reunion.

Ambrogi's pretty young wife said last night that a Washington newspaper had informed her early yesterday her husband had been drowned. "Those were terrible hours until we heard the true news," she said.

Richard was hailed as a hero by his family and friends. He admitted that he "won't go fishing again for a good long time." His elder brother was even more explicit.

"I won't go down the bay unless I get an ocean liner," he observed.

augmented today by Moccasin-shod Sandia Indians to whom the mountain terrain is home, and a detachment of 115 CCC enrollees.

Fourteen expert climbers, who flew in by plane and came by rail yesterday to join the search, were congregated on the sheer, rocky heights of the peak by noon today.

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, the youth's mother continued her vigil at the base camp, searching the face of the peak through field glasses. Her stoic demeanor never once had broken and only an occasional quiver of her lips, or a strained word, had betrayed her anxiety.

With her at the base camp was Gov Clyde Tingley, who has directed the search with National Guardsmen, State police, forest rangers and soil conservation service workers.

D.C. Policeman Shoots Fleeing Colored Man

Victim May Die; Hazen Calls Officers to Confer on 'Brutality' Plaints.

Wallace McKnight, colored, 33, was shot in the abdomen and probably fatally wounded early yesterday by Policeman John E. Sobolewski, of the Third Precinct.

Sobolewski fired one shot when McKnight fled after he was stopped for questioning on Fifteenth street northwest near M street.

The shooting occurred less than a week after charges of police "brutality and in some cases killings" were presented to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown by a group of colored citizens. Hazen, in ordering investigation of the charges, summoned all police captains and inspectors to a meeting at 2 p. m. today.

McKnight, according to Sobolewski, acted suspiciously. He continued to run until he was captured at Thomas Circle.

Sobolewski told his superiors the colored man was carrying a package of foodstuffs. McKnight, who lives at 1302 R street northwest, was going home from work. He is employed at a restaurant.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendant of police, assigned Inspector James E. Beckett and Capt. Arthur E. Miller, Third Precinct, to investigate the shooting.

National Health Conference Set In D. C. in July

Six-Point Program for the Parley Is Outlined by Josephine Roche.

A six-point program for the National Health Conference here next month was announced yesterday by Chairman Josephine Roche of the President's interdepartmental committee to co-ordinate health and welfare activities.

After discussing the Nation's health needs, the 100 delegates who will meet at the Mayflower July 18, 19 and 20 will hear tentative proposals for filling these needs.

Experts from the Public Health Service, the Children's Bureau and Social Security Board will propose "means for expansion of public health services, expansion of maternal and child health services, enlargement of hospital facilities, care for the medically needy, a general program of medical care and insurance against loss of wages during sickness."

Miss Roche already has submitted these proposals for the President's consideration, and he suggested their presentation before the conference. She emphasized the fact, however, that the meeting will be open for those who wish to offer other programs.

"It is hoped that the conference will contribute to two ends," she said yesterday. "First is a better understanding of national needs in the field of health and medical care; second, the formulation of policies which will enable the medical and other professions, private organizations, Federal, State and local agencies and individual citizens to co-operate in efforts to meet these needs."

Delegates will represent the professions, health agencies, labor, agriculture, business and other groups of citizens.

State Will Call 10 Tomorrow in Wamplers' Trial

Special Dispatch to The Post.

La Plata, Md., June 26.— State's Attorney Edward J. Edelen said today at least ten State witnesses would be called tomorrow in the trial of T. Morris Wampler, former Washington attorney, and his wife on manslaughter charges in the "party" death of 71-year-old Charles Adams.

The Wamplers were accused of killing the aged handyman in a fight after a drinking party on the Wampler estate at Fenwick, Md. Alan Buck, 26, neighbor of the Wamplers and writer of children's stories, was arrested, but the grand jury failed to return an indictment against him.

Buck and Daniel T. Wright, former District Supreme Court justice, who testified he heard Mrs. Wampler cry "Stop that" about 15 minutes after Buck said he had left the scene, are expected to be the principal witnesses for the State tomorrow.

Wampler, who once served an 18 month jail sentence on Federal income tax charges, has been free under $2,000 bond. His wife was released under $1,000 bond.

Winner of Walkathon To Defend His Title

Richmond, Va., June 26 (AP).—The long-distance walkers will try it again—this time for the "State championship."

Nielson accepted, and the tentative plan is to walk from Hopewell to Richmond to Petersburg and then back to the starting point July 16—that is, if somebody donates some prizes.

Arlington Man Is Still Held In Creek Death

Md. State's Attorney Waits for Chemist's Report on Slain Woman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Prince Frederick, Md., June 26. After 96 hours in custody, a middle-aged Arlington street car conductor remained in Calvert County Jail tonight for investigation in connection with the mysterious death of Mrs. Esther Lewis, Washington charwoman.

No charge had been placed against the man, although lawyers explained Maryland statutes require that a person held for investigation be released after 48 hours unless a charge is made.

The conductor's wife said tonight arrangements had been made to employ an attorney to seek her husband's release unless a charge is placed at once. She said she expected the lawyer to contact Calvert County and Maryland authorities tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Arthur W. Dowell, State's attorney in charge of the case, said he was convinced "someone in Calvert County had something to do with the slaying." He indicated there were no developments in the investigation since arrest of the man now in custody and that he expected none until receipt of a chemist's report on the condition of the woman's viscera.

Mrs. Lewis, who would have become a mother in the late fall, was found floating against the south bank of Lyons Creek last Monday. She was identified by fingerprints and was buried yesterday in Arlington Cemetery beside her husband, John Lewis, veteran of two wars.

New Bank Code Is Announced To Encourage Longer Loans

Banks

Roman numeral classifications. For examination purposes loans in Classification I will not be classified in the examination report.

Classification II provides:

"Loans or portions thereof which appear to involve a substantial and unreasonable degree of risk to the bank by reason of an unfavorable record or other unsatisfactory characteristics noted in the examiner's comments. There exists in such loans the possibility of future loss to the bank unless they receive the careful and continued attention of the bank's management. No loan is so classified if ultimate repayment seems reasonably assured in view of the sound net worth of the maker or indorser, his earning capacity and character, or the protection of collateral or other security of sound intrinsic value."

Doubtful Loan Group.

In the Numeral III group are included loans "the ultimate collection of which is doubtful and in which a substantial loss is probable but yet definitely ascertainable in amount. Loans so classified should receive the vigorous attention of the management with a view of salvaging whatever may remain."

Loans in classification IV will represent "uncollectable" items and bank examiners are instructed to charge them off.

"Present practice will be continued under which the totals of II, III and IV above are included in the recapitulation of summary of examiners' classifications," the report states. "Fifty per cent of the total of III above and all of IV above will be deducted in computing the net sound capital of the bank."

Bank investments are placed into four categories. Group I securities are marketable obligations having a high investment rating, while group II are "those in which the investment characteristics are distinctly or predominantly speculative."

Carried at Cost.

Securities of group I will be carried at cost, neither appreciation nor depreciation in the market value being shown in the report. Group II securities will be valued at the average market price for 18 months just preceding examination and 50 per cent of the net depreciation will be deducted in computing the net sound capital.

Group III are securities in default, while IV represents stocks.

"Present practice will be continued under which net depreciation in the securities in Group III and IV are classified as loss."

Profits on the sale of securities must be allocated to establishing adequate reserves and wiping out losses. Examiners will not permit the use of such profits for other purposes.

The present practice will be continued under which estimated losses must be charged off. Also, the practice under which the establishment and maintenance of adequate reserves, including reserves against the securities account, will be continued and encouraged.

The present practice under which speculation in securities is criticized and penalized will be continued in force.

Franco Forces Claim Gains on Three Fronts

By the Associated Press

Hendaye, France, June 26.—Simultaneous advances on three widely separated Spanish war fronts were reported today by the insurgent command.

The gains were made in fierce encounters yesterday on the Mediterranean, central and southern fronts, but government reports indicated Gen. Franco paid a high price in casualties.

Franco's coastal armies hammering toward Valencia informed headquarters a spearhead had passed the village of Bechi, 32 miles north of Valencia, and had shoved onward under a broiling sun to occupy new positions on the Valencia side of the Seco River.

Interlocked in this operation was a similar offensive about 10 miles northwest of Bechi, near Fanzara to widen the insurgent coastal salient for protection of Franco's main seaboard column seeking to advance southeastward from Villarreal to Burriana.

Burriana, on the coastal side of the main Mediterranean highway running south through Sagunto to Valencia, would provide a strategic advance base for operations against Sagunto and Valencia, both principal gateways for government military supplies. The ports are 15 miles apart.

A National Defense Ministry decree signed by Premier Juan Negrin and published in the Official Gazette ordered commanders of the army, navy and air force to authorize services for all troops who request them.

Priests and ministers of all religions who have been mobilized already have been authorized to transfer from the fighting services to the Sanitary Corps, putting them in a position to minister to "spiritual needs."

During the 23 months of war, there have been no services in the government's front lines except in the Basque Country.

Schools Need Religion, Says Father Sheen

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, June 26.—The return of education to religious influence, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, was demanded today by the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of fundamental theology at Catholic University, Washington, at a pontifical high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, sung for the success of the National Education Association convention.

About 1,200 delegates to the convention, which began today, and 2,300 others, attended the mass.

Mgr. Sheen declared the educated and the intellectuals stood in danger today of the same loss of prestige and influence which befell the wealthy in recent years. He said modern educators were developing less than half the student by "piling facts" into his intellect without training his will.

Educators had erred on three counts, he said, identifying education with measurement and believing anything not measureable was not knowable; succumbing to propaganda; and forgetting history and tradition.

The tendency to identify education with measurement, had meant an inclination to ignore some of the "most precious things of life," he said, citing God and the human soul. He said it had also reduced morality to a statistical average, conscience to public consensus, and democracy to "a question of artithmetic in which the majority decides what is right quite forgetful that right is right no matter if no one is right."

Ex-Bandit Says Capone Mind Fails

Los Angeles, June 26 (AP).—Roy Gardner, notorious mail robber recently released from Leavenworth Prison, said here today Al Capone is the center of a feud at Alcatraz Prison.

"He undoubtedly is the most hated and most hating man at Alcatraz," said Gardner, who plans to start work tomorrow as salesman for a motion picture distributor. "If Capone does come out he will be a worthless man, for his mind is gone. His enemies and 'hell nights' have finished him."

Columbia Booklet Criticizes Legion Role in Education

New York, June 26 (AP).—Criticism of the role played by the American Legion in the educational, economic and political life of the Nation and a call to school officials to cease "pandering" to the veterans' organization came today in publication of a 280-page survey by Teachers College of Columbia University.

The booklet, "The American Legion As Educator," prepared by Prof. William Gellermann of Northwestern University, took added significance because of its appearance at the time of the annual National Education Association meeting here.

Gellermann called up on the educational leaders to repudiate any connection between the two organizations. The legion has joined with the N. E. A. in maintaining "Education Week" each fall. Former Commander Ray Murphy of the legion is scheduled to speak here Wednesday.

Chinese Despoil, Flood Chengchow, Thwart Japanese

Hankow, June 24 (Delayed) (AP).—How strategic Chengchow was looted, but saved from Japanese capture by eleventh-hour breaches in Yellow River dikes was told today by foreigners reaching Hankow after a fortnight's isolation in Chengchow.

Well-timed and well-placed breaks were said by refugees to have been made by plainclothesmen and soldiers of the Eightietb Chinese Division just in time to prevent Japanese occupation of the junction of the Peiping-Hankow and Lunghai railroads at Chengchow.

They regretfully recounted, however, how the city failed to escape widespread destruction when the Japanese were near its outskirts early in June and the defenders succeeded in carrying out their "scorched-earth" policy.

Thorough-going and uncontrolled looting by Chinese was called the worst within memory of the oldest inhabitants of often-fought-over Chengchow.

BarbaraHutton Seen Heading For a Divorce

Attorney Comes to London to Discuss Separation Settlement.

By the United Press.

London, June 26.—Countess Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow, five-and-ten-cent store heiress, and her Danish husbad are "headed for the divorce court," a close fried of her family said tonight as a prominent Copenhagen attorney, Henning Repsdorph, arrived in London to discuss a separation settlement.

Differences, due mostly to a controversy over the education and upbringing of their 2-year-old son, Lance, have been brewing for two or three months, the friend said in Paris.

Despite current reports, the informant said, the blonde countess is making no efforts to regain her American citizenship, which she surrendered six months ago on a flying visit to the United States.

There were conflicting reports as to whether the separation agreement, said to be expected sometime this week, would involve a financial grant to the 42-year-old Danish count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow who was reported to have received $1,000,000 when he married the former Barbara Hutton three years ago, immediately after her divorce from the late Prince Alexis Mdivani.

The friend said the settlement might involve financial matters, although it was denied the count had obtained management of his wife's $40,000,000 fortune.

In London, however, a report was published that the settlement would exclude "money considerations" and involve only the custody and upbringing of the curly-haried Lance.

There is little if any possibility, it was said, of a reconciliation. The differences mostly concerned the count's efforts to exercise supreme parental authority over their 2-year-old son, Lance, the person in close touch with the Hutton family's affairs, said, and to dictate the manner of the child's upbringing and education.

Countess Barbara's father, Franklyn L. Hutton, appeared not to fully understand the reasons for the break-up in the marriage and for this reason refused to make any public statement, the informant said.

Tientsin, China (Monday), June 27 (AP).— Chao Tien-Lin, Harvard graduate and principal of a Chinese school, was killed by gunmen today at his home in the British section of Tientsin. Political motives were believed to have caused the attack. Chao, a prominent Nationalist, had been threatened numerous times.

300,000 Catholics March, Chant in Canada Congress

Quebec, June 26 (Canadian Press). The closing ceremony of Canada's first national Eucharistic Congress today united 300,000 Catholics in one of the greatest religious demonstrations ever held in the Dominion.

One hundred thousand priests participated in the final procession from Quebec Basilica along the 3-mile, brilliantly-decorated route to the plains of Abraham, carrying lighted candles, praying, and chanting, between narrow sidewalks lined with 200,000 spectators.

Congress Hears Pope.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, June 26 (AP).—Pope Pius addressed the Quebec Eucharist Congress by radio today from his summer palace, urging the faithful gathered there to follow in the footsteps of Canada's saints.

Despite one of the warmest days this year, the Pontiff delivered his 400-word speech in a strong voice, and concluded with a blessing upon the congress.

British Experts Will Curb Nazi Trade Growth

By the United Press.

London, June 26.—Prime Minister Chamberlain has established a commission of experts to increase British trade with Central Europe and the Balkans in an effort to halt Germany's economic expansion to the East, reliable informants said tonight.

The commission, including treasury, foreign office and board of trade officials, is headed by the government's chief economic advisor, Sir Frederick Leith-Ross.

Chamberlain's decision to name the commission was said to be largely the result of the London visit in April of French Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet. Ways and means of curbing German expansion toward the Black Sea and Mediterranean were discussed.

Britain, along with France, fears Germany's lead in trade with the Danubian states may result in German control over the center of the continent and 150,000,000 people.

Continued German economic expansion in that direction, Britain fears, would bring Rumanian oil, Yugoslav cereals and cattle and the raw materials of Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey up to Germany's doorstep.

Still An Issue.

President Roosevelt's unwarranted slur against the Supreme Court in his radio address of Friday night has been too generally passed over. Its immediate importance is perhaps subordinate to the political and economic aspects of the speech. But the President's assumption that the court is now just another New Deal agency willing "to collaborate with the two other branches of government" is nevertheless a pointed reminder that the independence of the judiciary is still an active issue.

The President's keen desire to "win wars," even though he may "lose battles," was plainly evident in this address. Apparently the defeat of his efforts to pack the Supreme Court has never ceased to rankle in his bosom. So he is attempting to turn the greatest blunder of his career into "an important victory for the people." If that sort of tortuous reasoning makes the President's burden any lighter, no one is likely to object. But it is regrettable that the Chief Executive should resort to language which may be regarded as insulting to the Supreme Court to salve his own conscience.

"The real objectives" sought by the President's message of February 5, 1937, were to make the Supreme Court subservient to the Executive and thereby prevent further obstruction of New Deal legislation. To say that those ends "have been substantially attained" is to make entirely unwarranted assumptions. The severe rebuke that was administered to Secretary Wallace recently in the Kansas City stockyards case should be ample evidence that the Court will not automatically accept the New Deal's concept of what is constitutional.

The President claims that he won the Court fight because that tribunal has "entirely changed" its attitude toward constitutional issues. Unquestionably the Court has modified some of its views as to what the Constitution permits and forbids. The decision most typical of its broader outlook is that upholding the Wagner labor relations act. Yet long after this decision was handed down Mr. Roosevelt was insisting that his fight to enlarge the membership of the Court had to continue.

Members of the Court have every reason to resent the President's indiscreet charge that they are collaborating with his Administration. If that is true, the justices have betrayed a public trust. Courts are not established in this democratic country to "collaborate" with the Executive who happens to be in power. Their duty is fearless application of the law, including the Constitution, whether governments or individuals are before the bar.

It is the President's failure to understand this function of the judicial system that has led his Administration into its most serious difficulties. He will be fortunate if the present assumption that the Court now acts in a new role does not lead to further grief.

British Trade Accord.

Rumors of impending devaluation of the dollar, while officially denied, have been disturbing. They have accentuated fears that a new period of exchange instability might postpone and possibly wreck the negotiation of a trade agreement with Great Britain. However, there is no reason whatever to conclude that the uncertain duration of the existing tripartite monetary accord will interfere with the progress of the trade discussion. On the contrary the widening of international trade channels is a logical preliminary to stabilization of world currencies.

Only when trading relationships have been placed on a satisfactory basis would it be feasible to decide whether the existing rates of exchange afford a basis for definitive currency stabilization. As a protection against any subsequent alteration of currency values, it is easy to insert a provision in trade agreements providing for abrogation of concessions under given conditions. That has been done by the Department of State heretofore. Undoubtedly, a similar provision would be included in any agreement concluded with Great Britain.

Secretary Morgenthau's positive denial, as well as Ambassador Kennedy's emphatic repudiation of dollar devaluation as a futile device relegated to the past, encourages the belief that no extraneous obstacles will arise to prevent consummation of an agreement with the British according mutual tariff concessions. There has been some talk about linking this agreement with a settlement of the debt question. Such an arrangement would be extremely unfortunate and entirely out of line with the procedure followed in dealing with other debtor countries.

To link these issues would indeed be putting a formidable obstacle in the way of conclusion of the trade pact. In the first place the debts are a controversial political issue which would bring Congress into the fray. In the second place, the amount ultimately salvaged from the well-nigh universal defaults on war debt account will depend to some extent upon the kind of trade treaties we negotiate with other countries. Hence, it is assured that the Department of State will limit current negotiations with Great Britain to questions of trade, leaving other unsettled issues for separate discussion.

"Yes" Men Or Legislators?

Reactions to President Roosevelt's statement of political policy clearly indicate that the fate of the Democratic Party is not all that is at stake. The response of voters to the President's appeal will determine, in some degree, the type of government the country will have during the next two years. Congress may be a truly legislative body, or a national assembly with a majority of "yes" men pledged in advance to do the President's bidding.

The importance of the issue is clearly revealed in the address by which Senator Bennett Champ Clark opened his campaign for re-election in Missouri. In unmistakable terms Senator Clark has informed his constituents that when he disagrees with the President he will follow his own convictions. Presumably that makes him unacceptable as a New Deal candidate. In his radio address last week the President declared that "progress may be blocked" by "yes, but" legislators as well as dyed-in-the-wool reactionaries.

There seems to be a definite implication in this statement that the President will use his influence to eliminate "yes, but" men in favor of mere "yes" men. In the President's mind, of course, the test is one of "practical" liberalism as against obstructionism and reaction. Since Mr. Roosevelt makes himself the judge of what is and is not liberal, however, the effect is to put any legislator not whole-heartedly supporting the President's program under disfavor of the White House.

It is difficult to reconcile that attitude with the President's indorsement of the direct primary as a means of making the nominating process "a more democratic one." The very purpose of primary elections is to permit the members of each party in every State to select their own candidates without interference from the outside. In this case, however, the President says in effect that he considers himself the Democratic Party and would like to have elected candidates who will support what he regards as liberal legislation.

That philosophy of government by a great national leader supported by "yes" men, without any "buts," is a long way from the American concept of democracy. Legislators elected to Congress are supposed to have minds of their own no less than the President. Naturally they have a duty to decide for themselves what policies are "liberal" and what is best for the country as a whole. If some of them conclude that certain policies recommended by the Chief Executive are dangerous and unwise, they should not be subjected to punishment by a powerful bureaucracy with billions to spend when they again ask a vote of confidence from members of their own party within their own States.

There is a good deal of irony in the fact that the President waited to announce his participation in the Democratic primaries until after Congress had given him responsibility for the spending of a vast recovery fund. Candidates find it extremely difficult to pursue an independent course when powerful executive agencies may give or withhold projects to their States. Moreover, a word from the President in any State contest will probably be sufficient to give WPA workers and other beneficiaries of Federal spending their voting cues. That vast influence will not be minimized because the President chooses to speak as head of the Democratic Party.

The effect of the President's speech, therefore, has been to sharpen an issue that was only partially defined before: Shall Congress be a body of legislators or of "yes" men for the President. Senator Clark and many others who insist that Congress should be something more than a rubber stamp for executive proposals may find that the President's attitude has strengthened rather than weakened the case which they are submitting to the voters.

Newark Redeemed.

Good news is frequently poor news from a journalistic viewpoint. Yesterday's press in the main relegated to inside pages a report that Norman Thomas had addressed an orderly public meeting at Newark. Three weeks ago when he was forced to retire from a platform in the same city under a shower of eggs, he received wholesale front-page publicity.

As the Socialist leader was quick to remark, his second reception did much to redeem Newark which previously appeared to have been seduced by the mistaken patriotism of Mayor Frank Hague in neighboring Jersey City. To judge from the critical tone of questions addressed to Mr. Thomas, his audience was not entirely friendly. Nevertheless, the meeting was carried off in complete calm and the platoons of police and firemen assembled perhaps to do penance for their mismanagement of the Socialists' earlier meeting had no more to do than eject an overly gay drunk.

The whole affair is an effective denial of Mayor Hague's excuse for refusing Mr. Thomas a permit to speak in Jersey City. The Mayor has argued that the mere appearance of a Socialist would provoke public disorder. Newark, much the same sort of community as Jersey City, has now demonstrated that violence in such cases may be only a result of official violence and that the Bill of Rights is still the most reliable reference for officials when freedom of speech is in question.

Japan's Financial Distress.

With the Sino-Japanese war now almost a year old, the Tokyo government finds it impossible to hide from the Japanese people any longer the real seriousness of the situation in which the island empire has been plunged. Already Premier Konoye has publicly declared that Japan must prepare for a struggle of indefinite duration. In line with that policy a very drastic retrenchment program to conserve all available supplies of foreign exchange and raw materials is about to be put into effect.

Additional testimony of a striking nature regarding the severity of the strain imposed upon Japan's financial resources by her Chinese campaign may be found in the advice now issued by the Department of Commerce to American exporters to Japan. They are warned not to accept orders for shipment unless in possession of a confirmed, irrevocable letter of credit assuring payment in due course.

This admonition is not inspired by hostility toward Japan or a desire to place obstacles in the way of trading with that country. On the contrary, since Japan's aggressive drive in China began, Secretary Roper has on various occasions emphasized the importance of the Japanese market to American exporters, in particular stressing the complementary character of the trade between the two countries. Hence, we may assume that the department in the present instance merely wishes to protect American shippers from future loss due to possible inability of their Japanese customers to obtain foreign exchange with which to pay for imports.

This concern is justified by the steadily increasing severity of the exchange controls imposed by the Japanese government. Obviously these controls mean a growing scarcity of funds to cover external obligations. Last year large amounts of gold were shipped here by Japan to build up credit balances. During the last five months the gold movement this way has been a mere trickle by comparison. Japan is said to be hoarding her diminished gold supplies as a sort of war reserve for emergency use.

The exchange shortage is rendered still more acute by the sharp decline this year of Japanese exports, resulting partly no doubt from boycotts and partly from an inflationary rise in Japan's domestic production costs. Other reasons mentioned for dwindling exchange reserves are the loss of so-called invisible receipts from tourist trade and from shipping due to the transfer of vessels engaged in foreign trade to transport service.

Meanwhile the area of warfare extends and the cost of the Chinese campaign mounts. Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that the Japanese are feeling the financial pinch of the war to an increasing degree. Their situation is a reminder of the extremes of exchange rationing to which Germany has been reduced in her efforts to pursue political policies incompatible with her restricted resources. In Japan, as in Germany, it is evident from the warning of the Department of Commerce that the high credit standing and solvency of individual Japanese firms affords no protection against loss to trusting foreign creditors. However willing and able to pay an individual debtor may be, he is in no position to satisfy his creditors if he lives in a country that exhausts its foreign credits by spending beyond its means.

She Blows, She Blows!

Continuing a popular trend, Hollywood is about to blow the dust off another old favorite. "Gone With the Wind" is its title and, let's see, wasn't Margaret Mitchell the author?

The word is that Norma Shearer and Clark Gable will take the parts of Scarlett and Rhett, respectively, and beyond question respectably. After all the fuss and furor over this casting problem, the selection of Miss Shearer is a bit amusing. Many months and much money spent scouring the country for just the right sort of sloe-eyed, honey-mouthed beauty to play the heroine results only in the choice of a Canadian and one from staccato-voiced Montreal at that.

Less surprising is the assignment of the male lead. For years now Gable has been the first choice of most fans for the part. Nor is it inappropriate that he made his debut in a play called "The Copperhead."

The production will probably be ready for distribution within a year. Meantime, at least two other "julep" films have been shown about the country and there's no telling how many more will rush into production at the news of "The Wind's" rising. That is not likely, however, to dim the curiosity of millions to see how a tale of so many words can be compressed into a movie. So it is to be hoped that, though the reels of the Selznick grind slowly, they will grind exceedingly fine.

Whitney At Bat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a world of cynics and pessimists it is encouraging to find a news item reflecting optimism. I refer to Richard Whitney's excellent batting on the scrub team at Sing Sing last Sunday.

I have never held with the satirical scribes and orators who claimed that accident of birth, nurture on a golden spoon, social connections, wealth, access to influential friends wholly unfitted a man for any socially useful work, developing at best a perfect mollycoddle. I do not deny that environment is a powerful factor in life, but I hold firmly to the conviction that given a set of conditions similar to those met by the common homo sapiens many of these coddled specimens would be able to break their frame of bootless reference and become in the field of sports, baseball players, runners, boxers, swimmers and in rare instances life savers, with the off chance of marrying an intelligent wife; and in construction work, laborers, muckers, watchmen, oilers, farm strippers, iron benders, calkers, tool checkers, liquid joint men, and, in some instances, operator of one bag or less cement mixers without skids at 60 cents per hour.

Mr. Whitney has made a courageous start toward debunking those rabble rousers who claim that he and his ilk are worthless parasites and I sincerely hope that he makes the grade with his new associatiates and succeeds in landing on the varsity.

South's Freight Rates.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Any cost and efficiency expert who walks into an industrial office will say, "Show me your freight rate sheet and I'll do the rest, and I mean comparative rates." He'll say that in a country store, a village, a town, a city, and to entire sections. It's the A B C of manufacture.

That, in a nutshell, accounts for the long industrial oppression of the entire Southern section of these United States, that has cost it a greater industrial loss than the war of the '60s. Like a community of atrophied superior idiots, we of the South, where Nature does the work, have for two-thirds of a century watched trains whiz to and fro laden with the products of other sections of the country that know the meaning of a freight rate—rates we never had, or even tried to get, until that significant hearing at Birmingham, April 12, where I saw 75 of the biggest attorneys of the Eastern railroads resisting the maiden effort of the Southern Governors' Conference for rate parity.

Seventy-odd years of industrial bondage because of lack of factories which had equal rates. It is a communal, a patriotic debt, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Nation owe this section.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to thank most sincerely the many friends and well wishers who signed the petitions asking me to reconsider my retirement from the Board of Education. It was not at all easy to persist in my desire to retire after such overwhelming requests not to do so. All of the reasons were gravely considered before making my decision.

It is my earnest hope that the public will give its heartiest support to my worthy successor in all of her endeavors to uphold and maintain high standards of education for our children. MARY A. McNEILL.

Bar Standards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a night law school student who is trying to better his chances in the world by the only means available to him, and in behalf of others in like position, I wish to express my indignation at the editorial entitled "Higher Standards for the Bar" in your issue of June 22.

It would seem to me that the purpose (editorially) of a city-wide newspaper, especially in the Capital of the Nation, should be to help the masses enjoy life more fully. The privileged few are always against anything that might loosen their grip on immediate gains and, in their short-sighted way, fail to look at the long-term aspect of any undertaking which will help not only the masses but will benefit them in the long run as well.

LEO E. COVALESKI.
Washington, June 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me contest the motives which prompted your very fine paper to publish the editorial, "Higher Standards for the Bar." Not that higher standards aren't the course of progress, but inasmuch as part of the program of these proposed higher standards is the abolition of the night law school.

How can we expect this country to progress at its present rate if we withdraw this most valuable aid? How could countless young Americans enjoy the privileges of higher education if night courses were not open to them? Check the number of night students; should not that be convincing proof that the demand is there, that the need is there, and most important of all that the will for self-betterment is there?

JOSEPH M. DELANEY.
Washington, June 23.

"The Greatest Danger."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to take occasion to compliment whoever wrote your editorial of June 23 on the railroad situation. It is in brilliant contrast to so many superficial editorials on the same subject which have appeared from time to time in past years, and if you keep up this sort of thorough work, The Post will establish that position of solid standing and influence which a daily paper published at the National Capital ought to have, and which none of them have had in my period of observation.

It has always seemed to me that the ideal "setup" would be an editorial staff sufficiently numerous to permit of a logical and systematic apportionment between understanding individuals of each of the major phases of human activity, whose duty it would be both to follow the most recent developments and to know and study the record of the past in those fields. Then current editorials could objectively link together the past and the present, so that a citizen of average intelligence, as well as the Congressional delegates and the enormous administrative organization in Washington could more clearly understand and orient themselves to the true significances of whatever they are embarked upon.

The greatest danger we face is that of public opinion being crystallized upon mistaken premises, due to the very superficiality of the thin mental pabulum with which their minds are daily fed.

The need is great for a great, independent newspaper to supply the thoroughly intelligent discussion from an objective point of view. Of course, I realize that to do this comprehensively would cost a great deal of money, which has doubtless made it seem impracticable heretofore, but at least you seem to be well headed in the right direction.

An objective point of view is but a snare and a delusion when a writer has no really thorough knowledge of his subject, and merely takes somebody else's discussion, or attempts merely to state with neutral impartiality what each interest asserts, and on a foundation of IF concludes by pointing in general terms to self-obvious things.

MOULTRIE HITT.
Washington, June 23.

The Hague Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your excellent editorial in The Post of June 24 headed "The Hague Philosophy" is timely and cogent. It exposes the real menace to democratic principles and procedure.

The Hague case, as you have shown, has several dangerous angles. One of these you have exposed when you say: "One of the high lights of the mayor's (Hague) testimony is his account of the ease with which exclusion from public halls can be effected. With patent pride he announced that his long fight for repeal of prohibition had made him a 'favorite among the liquor interests' who own most of the halls available for public speaking. These men often 'have business at City Hall.'" This means that beer barrel bullying will replace constitutional government.

Another angle which the press reveals is the long time that Hague and his gang have been intrenched in power. Hague's machine has kept him (and itself) as mayor and dictator for 25 years. This shows the wisdom and the need for not allowing any public servant to serve more than two terms. Hague-ism represents a noxious growth. It is not a sudden nor sporadic overnight mushroom development, but represents more the slow and steady growth of cattails in a pond where they eventually crowd out everything else living. If the President, who is head of the Democratic Party, were really a liberal and a lover of real democracy, he would drive Hague into oblivion and not wait for his critics to do so.

Another angle of the Hague case is the debonair assumption revealed in the mayor's court testimony that he is an expert in economics. He glibly gives his own definition of "communism" and classes it a "crime." Hague thus makes himself judge, jury, and prosecutor, as well as giving a definition of something he classes as a "crime." If this sort of procedure and philosophy prevailed generally in the United States fascism, would indeed, not be on its way here, but would already be an accomplished fact. Hague is really breeding communism.

Indictment Of "Peace Lobbyists."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your columns not long ago Mr. H. B. Bradford claimed that "we are not a people of cringing weaklings." If he is right, the he-men in the United States are unorganized and silent while the minority of cringing weaklings are organized in one of the world's most powerful lobbies, and they have been running Congress and the country.

Of course, our peace societies are sprinkled with persons like "F. B. B." who advocate our asinine policy of rigid legislated neutrality, in part, at least, because it weakens France and Britain and makes it easier for the military dictators to extend their barbarous despotisms over Spain, Austria, Czechoslovakia, etc. There is also more than a sprinkling of Irish always ready to cut off Uncle Sam's nose to spite John Bull's face. Some of them, apparently "C. E. R." among them, who are not recent arrivals, but who on foreign affairs are still emotional, determining their attitude on foreign policies by asking not what policy will serve the interests of the United States, but what policy will do most harm to the British.

Most of our peace lobbyists, however, are just cringing weaklings. They have absorbed this emotional propaganda about the horrors of war until they are incapable of facing the problem like men. They can't figure out the combinations coldly and logically. In any constructive long-range policy, any policy to defend present or future interests of the United States, they can always scent one-tenth of 1 per cent of risk, and that stops them in their tracks and sends them scurrying again to the kennels of do-nothing insolationism.

Our peace lobbyists cringe before the prospect of war and rationalize their fears into silly slogans, such as "other people's wars." Congress is compelled to vote a billion dollars for defense, but still they maintain that the spread of military despotisms is no affair of ours. The morning paper notes the design of a new airplane to carry a hundred men on a nonstop flight of 5,000 miles at 300 miles an hour, but the emotions of these people who cringe at the thought of war tell them that the United States is isolated!

This emotional and defeatist approach to the problem of war, however, shows signs of petering out. Even such a lobby as these peace societies have maintained cannot forever fool all the American people, cannot convert all our he-men into cringing weaklings.

The Post Impressionist

Our Alley.

I DO NOT wish to seem too possessive. It is not entirely our alley. The occupants of a distinguished office building can lay as much claim to it as we.

Nonetheless, it lies in the center of our block, winding about like a brown worm-hole in what is at least a respectable apple. The houses are tiny two-stories houses. Some of them are empty, hollow, one might say, like a decayed tooth—their walls jagged where the bricks have dropped on the ground below. Places for cats to die in.

But most of the houses are very much lived in. Sometimes they rock with life. In fact, so much life comes out of them that they seem to have underground passages, the visible portion corresponding to the mound of an ant hill.

I regret to say that the crowded conditions do not make for complete peace. There are many fights. But I have never seen fights so unattended by bodily harm. Brooms are waved, but they never seem to land. Bricks are placed where they will make the most noise and do the least damage to human skulls. Invectives burst like toy balloons in the mouths of those who exhale them. "I ain't called you nothin', you ———, I ain't called you nothin'."

Under the high street light a man wavers like a black shadow against the hot brick walls of his house. His arms stretch out, whirl around, drop to his sides, as if he were grasping for a receding world. "Kill her!" he says, over and over again. "Blow her brains out! I'll pay for it!" He is talking about his wife. Now and then he stumbles back into his house and each time she pushes him out again, rending the air with her screams. Nobody pays the slightest attention. Some of his neighbors sit on their dilapidated front steps, fanning. Bulky forms fill the upper windows, gazing indifferently another way. Children play on the street, dodge about his tottering form in their games as they would about a pair of pants fluttering on a clothes line. It is apparently an entirely personal matter.

Sometimes (usually Saturday night) the arguments become factional. Platoons are formed. The children leave their play and fall in line with their elders according to their convictions. Then in the dim street lights, under the resplendent dome of the Capitol, the alley becomes a street scene in a comic opera. It is a sort of battle in counterpoint. Blast and counterblast. One listens in vain for the orchestra. Then suddenly it is all over. No dead are left lying in the street. Little colored girls appear at the outlet of the alley, in immaculate flowered and fluffy dresses, sometimes with their hands squeezed tightly over pennies, on their way to buy a lollyop or an ice cream cone.

But, except Saturday and Sunday night, most of the residents of our alley go to bed comparatively early—usually before midnight. One man, however, seems to be knocking at his door all night long. Apparently he is the wolf, because nobody will let him in.

* * *

One morning recently, when I had a half-holiday, Angelica and I walked down to the far end of the yard behind the house. One more step and we would be in the alley. We decided to appoint ourselve a committee of two to investigate housing conditions.

We attracted little notice. It was garbage time, and our neighbors had more important things to think about. "Momma, the garbage man! Momma, the garbage man!" we heard on all sides. A printed sign said fines ran as high as $300 for dumping garbage in the street.

The little back yards of the houses were guarded from our prying eyes by tall fences made of unpainted weather-beaten boards—unquestionable antiques. When the gates were opened we saw that in many cases the only source of water was in the yard. There were kerosene lamps on kitchen tables, too.

We were about to leave the alley without incident when a colored woman, sitting on her front porch, said good morning very pleasantly. Beside her stood a young girl holding a very young baby. It had a sallow, almost purple look; its legs sticking out from a shawl, were as thin as a sparrow's.

I said: "Angelica is very fond of children. I know she wants to see the baby." We stopped.

The woman on the porch asked, "Is that your little girl?" And when I said she was, she said that there wasn't any need to ask, because she was exactly like me. "She looks just like her daddy."

The girl holding the baby said, turning it away from us so that we could no longer see its face and lowering her head, "That's a sign of good luck."

I told them that we lived nearby and, as it was such a lovely morning, we decided to take a walk. All my self-endowed titles as an investigator or a housing expert faded away under their courtesy. One cannot ask one's neighbors on a bright summer morning in the course of a walk about the plumbing, lighting and sanitary conditions of their houses.

Angelica waved by-by and we left the alley. E. ENGLISH.

The Show Must Go On!

• • • •

Practically everything is ready for the probe except the booking of a midget or two to sit in witnesses' laps.

• • • •

This is something of a stumbling block to a big Washington investigation because of the changed situation which has brought all people down to one size. There isn't much difference now between the midgets and the magnates.

• • • •

All the biggies in what is left of business will be put on the pan this summer and already the Fords, Swopes, Youngs, Rockefellers, Morgans and Lamonts are looking up commuter rates between their homes and Washington.

• • • •

The big idea will be to determine whether big industries such as the steel, automobile, telephone, railroad and building industries should go on depending on efficiency, brains and orthodox bookkeeping or trust to luck and politics.

• • • •

There seems to be many people in the country these days who think business men should be elected every four years.

• • • •

The strange thing is that business doesn't seem very much disturbed by the investigation preparations. It's been harassed so much that a little extra heat doesn't seem to bother it. And then, too, a lot of industrial captains will be glad of a chance to go to Washington and forget that the sheriff is back home on the telephone.

• • • •

The make-up of the investigation committee is satisfactory to business. In fact business feels greatly relieved. It had a fear Gargantua might be named on it.

• • • •

Just how industry can reconcile Federal co-operation with the third degree is a little confusing, but business men have ceased asking questions and are just answering.

• • • •

The Democrats say the idea is to see if there is too much concentration of economic power and whether there is excessive financial control over production.

• • • •

There's a conviction that when industry can do so much for a country as it has done for the United States and still show signs of life after all that has been done to it, there must be something wrong.

• • • •

No-Hit Pitchers

By J. W. R.

Only Six In Major Leagues.

WHEN young Johnny Vander Meer dashed for the clubhouse the night of June 15 after blanking Brooklyn without a safe hit he had just scaled a baseball pinnacle never before reached by a major league pitcher. Other big league hurlers have pitched two no-hit games during their big league careers, and a couple have done it three times, but none have ever before registered two in a season, let alone in successive starts.

In fact, the feat has been accomplished just once before in the history of organized baseball. Nearly 40 years ago, in 1901 to be exact, Gene Wright, of the Dayton Western Association Club whitewashed Columbus and Grand Rapids on consecutive trips to the mound. The most no-hit games ever turned in by a minor leaguer in a single season were the work of a twirler named Justin, who racked up four for Lancaster in the old Ohio State League in 1908. Jack Highlands, Harvard southpaw, turned in a like number for the college record in 1892.

Pitching a no-hit game is a large order. Since Joseph E. Borden, masquerading under the alias of "Josephs," turned in the first hitless performance in the National Association back in 1875, there have been only 120 of these games pitched in the big time. In the same span an average of nearly a thousand games a year have been fought out on the diamonds of the National League and its various rivals.

• • • •

IT IS A RARE FEAT to hold a team hitless for nine innings. Luck is involved, even though the pitcher is in complete control at all times. And to turn in a technically perfect game, one in which no batter reaches first base, is the most difficult task of all. A perfect game is the rarest thing in baseball, requiring as it does not only invincible hurling but flawless support in the field as well. In the history of major league baseball there are recorded only six games of this type, while the far-flung minor league field lists less than a dozen.

John Lee Richmond, the first left-hander to make good in the majors, had the honor of pitching the first perfect game. Opposing Cleveland June 12, 1880, with his Worcester mates fielding perfectly behind him, Richmond didn't let a Cleveland batter see first. Only five days later John M. Ward, of Providence, turned back 27 Buffalo hitters in order. After this spectacle of miraculous pitching, the mark was untouched for nearly a quarter century.

Twenty-four years later, May 5, 1904, Cy Young, one of the greatest pitchers the game has known, blazed his fast one past the Philadelphia Athletics so effectively that not a base runner drew the breath of life. Young's feat was the first in the American League.

• • • •

PERHAPS no finer pitching spectacle has ever been witnessed on any diamond than the duel staged between Big Ed Walsh, of the White Sox, and Addie Joss, Cleveland ace, October 2, 1908. With a pennant in the balance, Walsh pitched one of the greatest games of a great career. He allowed but four singles and struck out fifteen, yet lost a 1-to-0 decision because Joss pinned the Sox ears back in order. Joss got his second no-hit game in 1910, before he was struck down at the height of his career, while Walsh pitched his game in 1911.

Ernie Shore was long denied credit for his perfect game. June 23, 1917, Babe Ruth started for Boston against Washington and walked Morgan, the leadoff man. When the Babe was chased by Umpire Brick Owens for arguing about the base on balls, Shore went into the box without a warmup, caught Morgan stealing second, and then retired the 26 men to face him. After careful investigation, the record was admitted to the "Little Red Book" of the late Charlie White—the last word in stellar performances.

Charlie Robertson was just an obscure White Sox rookie when he climbed the hill against Detroit April 30, 1922, but before the day was over he had made himself immortal by throttling Ty Cobb and his snarling Tigers with a perfect throwing job. It proved to be far and away the best effort of Robertson's career. After a few mediocre seasons he drifted to the minors and out of sight.

Ethiopian Survey

Study Being Made For Duce Will Tell Status Of Colonization; So Far Highway Work Is Most Evident In Struggle To Rule Empire.

By James M. Minifie.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Rome.

A FULL SURVEY of the results of the first two years of occupation of Ethiopia is being eagerly awaited here as Gen. Attilio Teruzzi, undersecretary of state for Italian Africa, inspects the country to bring back a first-hand report to Il Duce.

All that the public knows is that nothing more is heard of the unlimited jobs which in the first flush of conquest were proudly announced as about to be available. Neither is much heard of the far-reaching colonization schemes which were begun this year.

The fact is that the Italians are discovering that the military defeat of a country nearly three times the size of Italy does not mean its pacification, and that the latter task will take years. A few hundred colonists have been sent out, but men only, and these must be as ready to use a gun as a plow. Extensive emigration must plainly wait until political control has been established in fact as well as on paper over extensive areas.

Permanent Roads Now Under Construction.

THAT FACT appears now to have been thoroughly grasped, and the authorities are falling back on the traditional Roman method of pacification, the driving of permanent roads linking the administrative center of the country—Addis Ababa—with the outlying provinces.

When Marshal Pietro Badoglio was making his spectacular advance from the north into the heart of Ethiopia, 60,000 laborers toiled behind him building the road necessary to enable him to get up supplies and to use his mechanized equipment. Built hastily, this road collapsed under the impact of the first rains, and it became obvious that the country must have an all-weather system of surfaced roads capable of standing up to heavy traffic.

More laborers were brought from Italy, and work began on a system radiating from Addis Ababa. Some 3,600 miles have now been surveyed, and about half completed. The link is complete from Addis Ababa to Asmara in the north, and nearly finished to Assab on the Red Sea. Connections have been established between Asmara and the British frontier post of Cassala in the Sudan, and between Asmara and Gondar on the Lake Tana. Work is now being concentrated on driving roads west of Addis Ababa, which will in their turn link with the British Sudan system further south after traversing the richest and hitherto the most unsettled part of the country, known now as the Galla and Sidama Province.

Direct Connection With West Plotted.

Southward, roads have been surveyed to Mogadiscio the Somaliland port, and a direct link is planned between Mogadiscio and the western territories. Work has barely started on this part of the system and the country is still by no means safe.

Administratively, the old colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland have been merged into Ethiopia, and six provinces have been created. In the north Eritrea Province includes the Tigre, Tembian and Lake Ashanghi territory; Amara takes in Lake Tana, the headwaters of the Nile, and extends southeast to the left bank of the Hawash River. Harar stretches along the heights south of the Hawash as far as the Ganale Doria, which separate it from Galla and Sidama, while Somaliland consists of the old colony, with a fringe of the Ogaden. The City of Addis Ababa and an area 50 kilometers around form a separate province.

While roads are being pushed out from the capital, Addis Ababa itself is being planned as a constant reminder to the native of the power of Rome. A new city is being laid out southeast of the present one, which will be eventually reserved for natives. The old imperial palace, strategically placed on a hill, will be retained as garrison headquarters.

Meantime quarters at Addis Ababa are rather crowded, as a swarm of civilian administrators settles down to take over control from the army in the subdued areas. There are nearly 15,000 civilians there now, of whom 4,000 are women.

Food Must Still Come From Italy.

OWING TO the difficulties encountered in pacifying the country and the wastage of war, the Italians have not yet succeeded in making Ethiopia self-supporting in food, although the authorities are anxious to end the drain on continental Italy. Grain is handled by a central marketing authority, which fixes prices, paying a higher rate to Italian colonists than to natives, on the ground that their costs are higher.

The only empire product noticeable on Italian markets at present is coffee, which has long been raised in Eritrea. The plant grows wild in Galla and Sidama. It is a good type of coffee, but expensive, like all coffee in Italy. It costs 93 cents a pound.

However, although hopes of immediately realizing the potentialities of this empire have been deferred, they have not been quenched. What Teruzzi has to say about work in progress and the next steps on which Il Duce will decide are eagerly awaited here.

Japan Keeping U.S. in Dark on Warship Plans

Roosevelt's Decision Not to Build 45,000-Tonners Hints Lack of News.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's decision against constructing at this time battleships larger than 35,000 tons suggests confirmation still is lacking that Japan is building superwarcraft.

Reports that Nippon secretly had started or was planning 45,000-ton vessels prompted Congress to give the President discretionary authority to match them in the billion-dollar fleet-expansion bill.

Informed persons yesterday said Mr. Roosevelt decided the immediate international situation would not justify the United States expanding the size and might of any of the four capital ships for which Congress voted initial funds.

From conferences initiated at London, diplomatic quarters momentarily expect formal announcement of an agreement between America, Britain and France to permit 45,000-ton ships.

The four battleships to be started this year were designed as replacements for eight existing vessels approaching obsolescence.

Bids on the four will be asked about July 15, with a view to starting actual construction before the end of the year, the Navy announced.

Next year, however, the Navy plans to start work on a series of ships far mightier than any it has built before. Admiral William D. Leahy indicated this after a White House conference Friday, when he expressed belief the next new battleships would be 45,000 tons, or close to it.

A decision to go ahead now with the super-craft might have evoked charges the United States was leading a world naval race. Further, Navy officials told Congress completion of designs might delay their start a year.

The projected 45,000-ton craft could mount 12 16-inch guns, more numerous anti-aircraft and other secondary weapons, and carry heavier armor.

Navy constructors estimate battleship costs at $2,000 a ton. Thus, the 45,000-ton craft would cost $90,000,000 each.

Nathan's World

By Lewis Gannett

Fantasy Versus Realism.

ROBERT NATHAN'S stepdaughter, aged 4, looked up suddenly from her spinach and remarked in a dreamy voice:

"I know a little boy who turned into a flower."

"This, of course," Robert Nathan remarks, "was fantasy. Her brother aged 6, is the realist of the family. He exclaimed with energy, 'That's silly. You have to say what he ate that made him turn into a flower.'"

And there, in a few lines in a brief foreword to a collection of five of Robert Nathan's early novelettes, "The Barley Fields" (Knopf, $3) is the essence of Robert Nathan's realism and of his fantasy. If you like the story you will, even if you have never read "One More Spring," want to read these five faint, fresh, bittersweet stories.

Stephen Vincent Benet, who also writes an introductory on The World of Robert Nathan, says some true things about Robert Nathan, and some of which do not seem to me apt at all. He suggests that the realists photograph a world which we all know, and that therefore their novels stale rapidly. Meanwhile, every writer worth his salt creates a world of his own; and true works of the imagination do not stale. These five novelettes were published from 7 to 12 years ago, and they are as fresh today as ever they were. In every one of them is that same delicate, economical style, airy mockery and "the imagination of the heart." With these qualties goes also a sensitive love of life and a deep hatred of all those who would maim and distort it for any end," which Mr. Benet thinks Mr. Nathan's critics have missed.

That is true, though perhaps Mr. Nathan has not always been as inhumanly timeless as both he and Mr. Benet here seem to suggest. "The Bishop's Wife," in particular, suggests strongly those preoccupations with Puritanism which, in the "realists" of the 1920s, appeared so trivial to him and to Mr. Benet. Since these novelettes were written, "The Road to Ages" has proved again that Mr. Nathan lives in a contemporary world. One wonders just why he takes such a defensive tone in protesting that the "real" changes too often, while, "so long as little girls play with dolls," its essence is unchanged.

THESE NOVELETTES are what they are, and deliciously so. Mr. Nathan is at his best in such stories as "The Fiddler in Barly" and The Woodcutter's House," which forecast the mood of "One More Spring." The Fiddler of Barly appeared in the village pushing a street-cleaner's barrow full of earth which had growing in it a purple aster and some carrots. "Dirt should have things growing in it," he said.

You may, if you know any of Mr. Nathan's work, guess the rest: the fiddler, of course, believed that fiddling made the hens lay. It was his gospel, as it is Mr. Nathan's, that it is never wicked to make people happy, whatever the churchgoers may say. He urged Metabel Adams, who was not a very goodly girl though she did want God to love her, not to be afraid of dancing if it gave her joy; she should, he suggested, be as bold in beauty as a rosebush. And it is possible that he had something to do with the heretical conclusion of Mrs. Sebold, who kept the Barly store, that, whatever the parson might say, she did not believe that it was God who pushed Metabel into the cistern. "If God pushed her into that hole," she meditated, "then He's changed some since I was a girl."

Metabel, still no-account, and content to be no-account, appears again in "The Woodcutter's House," and, exploring the other side of a mountain, she comes upon woodcutter who is also no-account, and content with it, preferring not to cut ash for the mill, whatever the banker may say, because he likes ash trees on his mountain. A Little Green Man, of pronounced philosophical bent, also appears, hopping out from under the mushrooms, and it is perhaps the Little Green Man who suggests to Mr. Benet that Robert Nathan is more kin to Hans Christian Andersen than to Anatole France. It is the anti-Puritanical touch, doubtless, which suggests the strange comparison with Nathaniel Hawthorne.

It is with Anatole France, I think, that Mr. Nathan is closest kin. An Anatole France in New York and in the country side of Vermont, to be sure, with a limited range and a gentler smile behind the irony, but still an Anatole France—which means an artist with word rhythms and a skeptic of absolutes, as well as an affectionate painter of no-account folk. Mr. Benet is right; Mr. Nathan's stories have stood the test of time. Mr. Benet envies anybody who may meet them in this book for the first time; I do not. I think I enjoyed most of those stories which I here reread.

"THE DISCIPLINE of poetry shows in his work," says Mr. Benet. And that again is a pregnant sentence. Is it worth while meditating upon that five writers of distinguished prose in America, as various in their final individual rhythms as Robert Nathan, William Faulkner, Willa Cather, George Santayana and Henry Mencken, all began with "the discipline of poetry?" And so did Anatole France.

It is a long way from the world of Mr. Nathan to such a world of horror as is reflected in Graham Greene's "entertainment," "Brighton Rock" (Viking, $2.50). Yet there are moments in this mystery-story that-is-not-a-mystery-story which reminded me of Mr. Nathan. Rosie, the skinny little waitress, who found it ecstasy to think herself loved, even by a man whom she knew to be a murderer, is such a person as might well engage Mr. Nathan's affectionate attention. Once she had committed mortal sin with Pinkie, even before that, Rosie was "his, like a table or a chair." It was her mission and delight in life to be somebody's, to be possessed, altogether.

Pinkie is a young son of the slums determined to be a big shot in gangdom. His killing instinct is a mere by-product of his sense of his own inadequacies. Against him Mr. Greene sets Ida Arnold, a big-hearted, lusty man's woman, who liked life and had never seen a place in the world where she felt herself a stranger.

One admires the skill with which Mr. Greene creates his mood of horror. You know who killed Fred from the start, but you do not know why; and with that alone Mr. Greene creates a suspense such as few mystery stories succeed in maintaining. And he tricks you at the end, leaving you appalled and uncertain, as he intended. I suspect, however, that he packed too many moods into one book. When the reader constantly is aware of an author's skill, perhaps the author is not quite so skillful after all.

Turns With A Bookworm

EILEEN BIGLAND, in "Laughing Odyssey," which is a rather rose-colored report of a trip through Russia with one passage of unintentional and grim humor the author might now prefer to delete . . . About the death of Gorki, which occurred while Miss Bigland was in Moscow . . . There was general mourning: "Gorki had been ill, we knew, but despite his frailty and his age we had not imagined that he would die . . . The writer who stood with both feet firmly planted in Russian soil, the man who spent his long life in working for the betterment of the people, was dead. With his passing, the last tenuous bond between old and new Russia snapped . . . Would any literary giant, however great his prowess, receive from London the homage which Moscow accorded to Gorki?" . . .

• • • •

Maybe not . . . But he might be allowed to die in the course of nature, without being officially expedited . . .

• • • •

But Miss Bigland goes on quoting, serenely unaware: "Gorki is more than a name; it is a new word signifying freedom from spiritual and social slavery." . . .

• • • •

However, that isn't what we started to talk about . . . Miss Bigland thinks the Russians do have fun, a wonderful time; only she suggests that their carefully sequestrated world, the deliberate political isolation of Russia, must keep them childlike. "Millions of children . . . Can't you realize that when your children are confronted by all the comfort, the culture, the bustle of the modern world, they will stretch out their hands to seize such pretty toys?"

• • • •

How're you going to keep 'em down on the farm ——? But that's their worry, not ours . . . We were going to extend these remarks to the thesis of Robert E. McClure's new novel, "Harry Pickering,"—which is that the present generation of Americans are mostly suffering from prolonged adolescence . . . They can't wait another week . . .

1st Atty. General Proposed Court Reform in 1790

By the Associated Press.

A long-lost report from the first Attorney General of the United States showed yesterday the executive branch of the Government wanted the First Congress to revamp the Federal court setup.

The document, transmitted to the House on December 31, 1790, by Edmund Jennings Randolph, was recovered from its musty hiding place of years by workmen air conditioning the Capitol.

The first Attorney General, in addition to submitting a 40-page, handwritten report on the need for changes and improvements in the existing judicial system, transmitted a draft of a bill to the House to make alterations.

When President Roosevelt last year sent his recommendations to Congress for enlargement of the Supreme Court and other innovations, he attached a draft of a bill to his message. Attorney General Cummings worked closely with the President in drafting the bill and later supported it in hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Jurisdiction Problem.

Yellowed with age, but still legible, the Randolph report showed the young Nation had been confronted immediately with the problem of dividing jurisdiction between State and Federal courts.

"The courts of the United States demand an organization," Randolph wrote, "of which we have no apposite example in the history of foreign jurisprudence, and our own scheme has not received the full light of experience."

After listing the types of cases which he believed should be tried only in Federal courts, Randolph said those involving the Federal Government itself should be tried solely in Federal courts.

"To drag a confederacy before the courts of one of its members," he said, "would reverse the plain dictates of order; hazard the most critical interests of the union upon the pleasure of a single State; and enable every individual State under the pretext of a forensic sentence, to arrogate the general sovereignty."

Likewise, Randolph contended the State courts should not judge cases involving sister States.

Circuit Limits Proposed.

One alteration Randolph said he could not "forbear to suggest" was that Supreme Court justices be prohibited from sitting as Circuit Court judges.

Under a law enacted by the last Congress, retired Supreme Court justices may be assigned to duty on Circuit Court benches. Justice Willis Van Devanter has received such an assignment.

Randolph said the Supreme Court justices would have plenty to do becoming proficient in their own duties without acting as "circuit riders."

Randolph's bill proposed the establishment of five district and three Circuit Courts. The Circuit Courts—Eastern, Middle and Southern—were to be composed of the judges of the district courts "comprehended within said circuits."

He recommended that the Supreme Court be left as it was, consisting of a Chief Justice and five associates, the latter taking precedence according to the date of their appointments. If two or more were appointed on the same day, they would have ranked according to age.

Young Democrats Of First District Select Officials

By the Associated Press.

Old Point Comfort, Va., June 26. Paying tribute to President Roosevelt, C. O'Conor Goolrick, former State senator from Fredericksburg, speaking last night at the convention of the Young Democrats of the First District, said the reason for the "Democratic party being alive and vigorous is due in a large measure to the young Democrats of the nation."

Speaking at the banquet here, which was attended by many State notables, including Gov. Price, the speaker declared the "country is approaching a point where everything is on edge and it is due to the loyalty and faithfulness of the Democrats which has caused the party to survive through many controversial matters of government."

District Kiwanians At Coast Conclave

A large delegation of Kiwanians from the Washington area, led by Irving Diener, of Alexandria, Va., governor of the Capital District, has arrived in San Francisco for the twenty-second annual convention of Kiwanis International, which opens today.

The four-day convention, which has attracted more than 5,000 delegates from the United States and Canada, will draw up programs for the coming year in adult education, citizenship, urban-rural relations, vocational guidance, juvenile delinquency and welfare work.

F. Trafford Taylor, of St. Boniface, Manitoba, president of Kiwanis International, declared yesterday in his annual message that "the only hope for the future is Anglo-American good-will and tolerance."

"There is a growing realization that the nations of the world are in the process of ranging themselves on the side of either democracy or autocracy," he said. "Unless we exercise the utmost vigilance, our future is a dismal one."

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

E. Claude Babcock makes the following interesting observation concerning the recent Executive orders:

"In the betterment of the service, which is obviously one of the prime objectives of the present orders, there is another subject which has been neglected and which urgently needs attention. It is the question of secret personnel files.

"I have addressed a letter to the President requesting that his orders be further perfected by an expression that each employe be entitled to have copies of all material placed in his personnel folder.

"Under the present practice, unfortunately, all sorts of critical information goes into the folder without the knowledge of the employe and without opportunity to defend against false statements. Just recently I had a case in which there appeared in the file of an employe a letter from some unknown person to the effect that the employe was insane. It just wasn't true.

"But its very presence in the file has prevented normal advance by the employe because it always raised a doubt. The employe didn't know it was there. What a travesty! There can be no legitimate objection to permitting the employe to know what stands against him, if not to permit defense, then at least to permit correction of unrecognized faults. I hope we may soon see the end of secret files.

"The new orders give the Civil Service Commission a big job, it should be given, immediately, sufficient money to do a good job of it."

Letter to us which may interest you:

"May I call your attention to one union activity in which the United Federal Workers of America do not indulge—that is, paying its dues collectors for collecting dues from members. It is purely voluntary. I bring up this question because of the statement made by Harry G. Ritner in your column on June 21, that 'the unhonored employe who is responsible more than anyone else for the continuation of Federal employe unions is the collector. Of course, the 10 per cent granted for collection of union dues may have something to do with it.' I shall appreciate your giving the above fact publicity, because we who gladly work for the union do it not for gain, but with the hope that we can make this a better world in which to live."

Agent 2-N informs us:

Investigating a report by Local 12, U. F. W. A., last week, the Department of Labor's Division of Labor Standards found nine of the department's own employes laboring under sub-standard working conditions. For three years the Mails and Files Division of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization has been housed in what was obviously designed as a storeroom, with no windows, poor lighting and little ventilation. After three years of ineffective complaints, the employes turned to the union, and within three weeks after the union's conference with Robert C. Smith, director of personnel, the moving was begun. Today these employes are in a light, airy room, and working conditions at the Department of Labor are no longer below the normal set by the Division of Labor Standards.

Godfrey V. Wickward writes in from Roanoke, Va.:

"At the Veteran Facility Hospital here, the lodge of the A. F. G. E. known as 346 has the distinction of having a lady president. She took office quite recently. The officers here are: Miss Lucile K. Rhodes, president; Roger Carroll, secretary; Miss Rothwell, treasurer, and P. M. Heinlein, vice president. This lodge is a leader in the community . . . The busiest crowd of movers in town at the moment centers around the new $4,000,000 Bureau of Engraving and Printing annex. The initial transfer of units is being made and the moving will continue through the summer.

Jews Are Germs Of Disease, Says Julius Streicher

Nurnberg, Germany, June 26 (U.P.). Julius Streicher, intensely anti-Semitic Governor of Franconia, assailed Jews and Czechoslovaks in an address today before 200,000 listeners.

"As far as I am concerned, all Jews may die!" he roared. "When the last Jew is dead—that is, when the last bacillus of disease has disappeared—will the sun shine again on the peoples of this earth.

"Whoever recognizes the League of Nations allies himself with the devil and the Jew," the editor of the anti-Jewish Stuermer added. His hearers included Franconian peasants and soldiers participating in maneuvers.

Big Crops Make City Scarcity, Farmers Told

AAA Pamphlet Declares Consumption of Urban-Made Goods Is Cut.

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration told farmers yesterday that when they produce bountiful crops they "create scarcity conditions" in urban areas.

The statement was made in a pamphlet of questions and answers on this year's farm programs prepared for distribution among farmers. One question was:

"If farmers reduce acreage of certain crops, are they not contributing to a scarcity program?"

The answer:

"Not if they merely reduce the amount of the surplus they cannot sell. Experience has shown that large farm surpluses of such crops as wheat, corn and cotton actually create scarcity conditions in the city by lowering farm prices so much that the farmer is unable to buy city-made goods. That merely adds to the unemployment in the cities."

Must Buy City Goods.

Another question asked:

"Why should the AAA reduce production when there are people in this country who need food and clothing?"

The answer:

"The farmer can no more afford to give away his produce than the city storekeeper can. If he gave his produce away, he could not buy what the city worker makes. If he gave only his surpluses away, he would destroy the market for the rest of his crop. . . . The real limiting factor in providing food and clothing for people is virtually always consumer income."

Some other questions and answers:

Q. "If the Government wants to get foreign markets for farm products, why does it not allow farm production to increase and farm prices to fall to levels so low as to increase sales to other countries?"

Farmer is Businessman.

A. "A farmer is a businessman. Sales to foreign countries are of value to the farmers only if they result in more income for them. Growers cannot afford to deplete their soil and bankrupt themselves indefinitely just for the privilege of selling cheap cotton, wheat or other products to foreigners. . . .

Q. "What are the prospects for enlarging foreign markets for cotton, wheat and pork?"

A. "If we want to enlarge foreign markets for our cotton, wheat and pork, we will have to be willing to do two things: (1) Increase our imports of manufactured goods and other products that foreign countries produce more cheaply than we do; (2) meet the competition of other countries that export these farm commodities, however low their prices.

One question asked why the Government did not fix farm prices and do away with the crop control program.

"Price-fixing for farm products," the reply said, "would make it necessary to have absolute control of all agriculture including processor industries. It would involve strict regimentation and extreme bureaucracy and lead to price-fixing for all commodities. . .

One of the loveliest estates in Washington, Mrs. Archbold's home is an ideal setting for an out-of-doors fete. The Spanish-type house is surrounded with gardens and grassy slopes. Yesterday the roses were in full bloom, and chairs had been placed on the lawn at one corner of the residence. At the opposite end of the grounds is a swimming pool adjoining a bathhouse, the walls of which are decorated with scarlet geraniums.

Talk Preceded By Concert

Preceding Miss Tsai's talk, the Washington String Quartet gave a concert which included Mozart's Quartet in D Minor; "Pixy Ring," by Waldo-Warner, and Beethoven's Quartet in F Major. Members of the ensemble were Milton Schwartz, Paul Brightenburg, John Alden Finckel and George Wargo.

Miss Tsai, who was introduced by the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, was one of the leaders of the Chinese students' strike in Peking in 1935, protesting her country's submission to Japanese aggression. Later she represented her country at an international students' conference in Geneva, and for the past two years has been living in New York.

Tea Served On Terrace

Following the talk the audience assembled for tea on the terrace overlooking a ravine. The terrace opens out from a loggia, where are Mrs. Archbold's famous collections of big-game trophies bagged in Africa, including elephant tusks, giraffe's heads, and war implements of native tribes.

Refreshments included home-made sandwiches of sardine and lettuce and cookies and cakes.

Mrs. Archbold wore an aquamarine sports frock with a white fish-net scarf at the neck and a white Panama hat. Among those she welcomed were Miss Yoeh Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, who wore native dress; the Counselor of the Soviet embassy, Constantin Oumansky; the Counselor of the Chinese embassy and Mrs. Ing; Jacob Baker, and Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes.

Mrs. Buell also talked, speaking for her mother, who is spending her vacation in the Catskills. Clubrooms Established During War Period

During the World War the league established clubrooms on H street, in the former home of the late George Bancroft, which served as a gathering place for literary women who had come to the Capital to take Government positions or do war work. It was opened October 15, 1917, and weekly "knitting teas" were held at which members knitted for the soldiers while they listened to the programs.

During the winter of 1918, when the weather was severe and there was a fuel as well as a housing shortage in Washington, league members were there as hostesses every night for six weeks, keeping clubrooms open to women in the Government who desired to spend their evenings there.

The District branch for four years published "The Pen Woman," a magazine which included news of the organization and contributions from its members. Mrs. Tiller has the complete files of the periodical, which was started during her presidency.

THE ARGENTINE Ambassador and Mme Espil, shocked as was everyone at the sudden death from heart failure of Hector Diaz Leguizamon, first secretary of the embassy, have canceled the luncheon they were to have given on Wednesday in honor of Miss Margot Garrett and her fiance, Mariano Zuberbuhler. The late Senor Leguizamon was to have been an usher in their wedding that afternoon.

Hard hit by the news, Miss Garrett and Mr. Zuberbuhler did not attend the party given last evening by George Wheeler, Samuel Biddle, William Russell and George Mahoney, at which they were to have been honor guests. So many invitations had been issued and such extensive preparations had been made for the affair, however, that the hosts felt it would be impossible to call the whole thing off at the last minute.

The other festivities planned for be given tomorrow evening by Mr. and Mrs. Garrett, are expectthe couple, including a dance to ed to proceed as scheduled. The principals concerned feel that the late Senor Leguizamon would have wanted it that way.

He is to be married next Saturday to pretty Virginia Layton, of Wilmington, Del., niece of the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith. Miss Layton has been going crazy trying to plan her trousseau, as she did not know until the other day whether they would be sent to a hot spot in Guatemala or to an icy town in Latvia.

Herbert Fales is to be best man at their wedding, and Wallace LaRue is also going up for it. The latter will then proceed to his home in St. Louis before setting sail for India.

Midsummer Styles Show Fall Portents

Upstanding Sleeves Are Featured in New Dresses.

'Bi-Color' and Peasant Influence Are Important.

WHILE the thought of fall clothes is dismaying these hot days, no one can afford to ignore the fashion omens that are being manifested in new midsummer styles. Clothes bought in July usually are to be worn well into the fall, so the forehanded shopper should have a rather definite picture in her mind of what lies ahead in the world of fashion.

One comforting thought is that the silhouette probably won't show any radical changes. It will be moulded as in the spring. Upstanding sleeves—or Victorian shoulders are a marked feature of many of the fall dresses. They give a perky, uplift effect that is generally becoming. Other features of the fall silhouette include draped bodice, natural waistline, close-fit hips, flared or straight-to-the-bottom skirts. Skirts remain short.

Things To Remember.

If you expect to be a midsummer shopper, with one eye on fall, here are some other things to remember:

Color will be very important, although black, as ever, will continue popular. Leading the color field as present for fall are wines and the gray-blues which range from slate to peacock.

Combinations of two or more colors, with or without black will be in evidence particularly in millinery. What is called "bi-color"—such as black with fuchsia, burgundy with navy, black with green—was most important at the Paris midseason openings. Black will continue its affinity for all the members of the pink family, including shrimp.

Dirndl's Remain.

The peasant influence will continue in dirndl type skirts and bodices, in basque bodices, embroideries and appliques. Corselette belts with bright peasant handiwork will enliven dark frocks.

Suits will continue popular, fur being much in evidence on them. Yokes, tunics, tie belts an dother "dressmaker" effects will give them a feminine look.

The usual fall beret crop will appear soon in the shop windows. These will range from tiny round off-the-face types for young girls to tricornes, haloes, full moons and shapes that are adaptable for women of all ages.

Perky Sleeves Herald New Silhouette

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

SEEMS AS HOW the marriage-madness here during the rice-littered month now closing was especially violent this year. We had some jim-dandies among the hundreds of legal matings, including young Alfred C. Vanderbilt's surprise wedding, and the defiant marriage of blonde Andrea Luckenbach to the Dobbs boy of her choice—daring the disapproval of her shipping-king pappy, Commodore Edgar. But my pet bride of the lot was little Lily Pons, and I rushed to see her before she and her Andy Kostelanetz could sail for two months in South Africa.

ALICE HUGHES.

For newlywed ecstasy, I point out that cute half-pint wren of the Metropolitan. Her musical-conductor husband, as you know, is not much taller than she, and what a small but peppy pair they made as they shimmered about a tower apartment in the Waldorf! She'll trill for eight weeks at the great Colon Opera in Buenos Aires, and papa will conduct four big broadcasts down there.

Were they full of chatter about times to come!

"Of course I'll keep singing," Lily told me.

"Well, that's a novelty, old boy. In the matter of a possible family, Lily said, "If I have one, I am thrilled. Perhaps it would be a vacation." Mighty lucky you put in that "perhaps," baby!

Lily hated to leave her country place up at Silvermine, Conn., but away they went. The big romance of the little people ignited when he conducted her radio programs—and he was a gone goose in no time! They start hand in hand, musicians both; off on what should be a long and happy journey.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Helen Hayes says she will not go back to Hollywood and the movies, but will stay right here in old York State at her Nyeck home and then play two weeks of "The Merchant of Venice" at the straw-hat theatre in Suffern. Helen has always told me how she both dislikes and fears Hollywood—and always adds "I don't feel I have anything to give the films." That's because her first and only real professional love is the living, breathing stage! . . .

No sooner had I noted here the new strapless bathing-suit "held up by faith and a small zipper" than I saw pretty-deb Edwina Atwell wearing one in the surf at the Atlantic Beach Club. She is my little old man's prime favorite among the glam-girl set, and I was glad he was safe (I hope) way up in the country. . . . .

Civil War Veterans Prove Contention That Thin Men Live the Longest.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THIN MEN LIVE longest. On Memorial Day this year the 12 veterans of the G. A. R. who joined the parade in New York City were all in their 90's. The oldest was 96, the youngest 90. Not one was overweight and many of them were decidedly thin. Longevity is not compatible with overweight.

As you would imagine, these veterans who fought in a war 75 years ago have very definite ideas on the subject of health. William H. Raser, 90, one of the younger veterans, believes that "the daily cocktail habit, while not intemperate, will shorten lief on an average of 60 to 65 years. I have noted that to be the case in many instances."

Mr. Raser looks exceptionally young for his age and is hale and hearty. He is 6 feet tall and weighs the same as he did at the age of 40, which is 180 pounds. He has never been overweight. Up until recently he has enjoyed exercise but now admits preference for rest and relaxation.

His contemporary, Christopher A. Farrell, is 92 but still likes daily exercise in the form of walking. He thinks that "outdoor exercise is best for old and young, rich and poor—at least, I find it so." He is slightly underweight, as are most men of his age. Mr. Farrell has retained his erect military bearing and steps along as smartly as a cadet.

The G. A. R. veterans bear out the medical theory that normal weight goes with a long lifeline. None of the veterans interviewed have ever been excessively overweight.

Menus Are Suggested.

Doctors tell us that our normal weight at 30 is our healthiest weight from then on. It is a well-known fact that the brain, liver, lungs and other organs do not increase as we grow older. A gain in weight with advancing age is almost entirely due to the accumulation of unnecessary fatty tissue. This weight imposes an additional burden on the organs and makes them wear out more quickly. Aside from the normal protective layer, fatty tissue has no function to perform.

Excess fat is first deposited in the subcutaneous tissues but gradually the muscles and even the heart become infiltrated. As new blood vessels are formed to nourish this parasitical tissue, the heart must work harder and the blood pressure may be dangerously raised.

Statistics show the lean man to have an advantage over his fat brother of 20 years' life expectancy, and these veterans bear out these statistics.

Enjoy through all next winter the best of the world's living, amid the world's most thrilling sights! South America, Africa, India, Malaya and the South Seas. From N. Y. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is it ever appropriate to follow up an acquaintanceship made without a formal introduction by a mutual friend? At a social center in this city it is the custom for visitors to introduce themselves to a hostess who introduces them in turn to others who have assembled for bridge games, etc. At such a gathering I became acquainted with a young man who wishes to "date" me. Is this degree of acquaintanceship adequate for propriety's sake? I was the hostess at this gathering, by the way. Incidentally, when is a "pick-up" not a pick-up?
Yours sincerely. UNCERTAIN.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: This is a situation in which one should be less concerned with conventional "appropriateness" than with common sense social advisability. In my opinion, it is unwise to the point of being indiscreet to accept an altogether unvouched-for stranger on the basis of friendship, unless, of course, one is an expert judge of human nature, capable of accurately estimating character without the assistance of label and reference. Some persons possess this ability almost intuitively; others develop it through long (and sometimes disillusioning) experience at dealing with the public; and still others never develop such canny discernment and therefore must (or should) keep inside the protective confines of conservative social procedure in making friendships.

• • • •

When an unconventional meeting between a given man and woman inspires the former to wish to pursue the acquaintanceship, the first thing he does, if he is a gentleman (by virtue of either background, upbringing or natural instinct) is to muster and present to the lady acceptable social credentials.. Either he negotiates a follow-up introduction of a formal kind, or he persuades a mutual friend to bring them together in a small, informal group; or he gives explicit information about his family background and connections, his education, his professional affiliations, and so on; or he besieges the lady with a brand of courtship so engaging, so sincere and in such faultless taste that she is forced to conclude he is a civilized and socially acceptable person.

• • • •

If a man presumes, on the basis of merely "scraped" acquaintance, to suggest another meeting with a woman—acting on the assumption, apparently, that no exchange of credentials is necessary—I think she is warranted in discouraging his overtures, at least at first. If his interest is genuine and on the "up-and-up," as we say, he will respect her hesitancy and take measures to set her doubts at rest. His social worth will be revealed by the measure of good breeding and resourcefulness he brings to the task of promoting the desired friendship.

• • • •

A "pick-up" acquaintanceship, in my vocabulary, means entering, without inquiry or heed for consequences, into association—on a basis of friendship—with a person whom one has encountered by chance in a public place—say restaurant, hotel, park, theater, on the street, and so on. A "pick-up" acquaintanceship is not a "pick-up," to employ your phrase, when it involves a friendly interchange with some person encountered under a friend's roof, at one's place of work, or under other similar circumstances which, of themselves, might be considered to bespeak the presumable integrity and mutual interests of the respective individuals. M. H.

Expectant Mother's Query.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should appreciate your suggesting in your column some well-chosen, accessible literature that the prospective mother should read. I have several pamphlets on diet and other simple requirements and would like to supplement these with something on eugenics in general—something that will be beneficial both now and after the birth of my child. Please do not suggest anything depressing (as I am prone to worry unduly at times), but rather something both enlightening and entertaining. Very truly yours, J. H. B.

Recommended Reading.

DEAR J. H. B.: One of Washington's ablest obstetricians concurs with the head of the sociology department of the local public library in recommending Frederick Carpenter Irving's "Expectant Mother's Handbook" and George Livingstone Brodhead's "Approaching Motherhood" as excellent reading matter along the line you have in mind.

• • • •

Also, there is Carolyn Conant van Blarcom's "Getting Ready to Be a Mother," Frederick Bartlett's "Infants and Children, Their Feeding and Growth," and Dr. Josephine Kenyon's "Healthy Babies are Happy Babies." This last is highly recommended by the District of Columbia Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare. Any of these books may be borrowed from the local public library at Seventh and K streets northwest.

• • • •

Then the obstetrician referred to above says there is no more instructive reading for expectant mothers than that contained in two bulletins issued (free of charge, on request) by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor. These bulletins are entitled 'Prenatal Care' and "Infant Care," and the obstetrician says of them: "They are so good that I keep a supply constantly on hand to give to expectant mothers. They contain as much information as is needed. They tell the mother how to take care of her health, what symptoms to report to her doctor, how to prepare against the baby's arrival; all about diet, clothing, exercise, and so on. They prepare her for dealing intelligently and competently with the new situation she is facing." M. H.

Spun-Glass Flowers.

Paris (U.P.).—There are big flowers which are knit in spun glass around the bottom of one of Anny Blatt's white knit evening dresses. The spun-glass gives the effect of silver embroidery. It is echoed in the thick chain which joins the six skirt panels. And it is used again for a chain belt made of big spun-glass links.

Tulle Jackets.

Paris (U.P.).—The tulle or net jacket—ideal for informal summer wear—is most often made in black whether it be coarse or fine net, silk or cotton. Mainbocher uses silk net in black for a long jacket (a short coat) which is double breasted and fastens with six black bone buttons. Patch pockets are set low on each side of the front.

Can You Tell the Difference?

A feature of the International Association of Display Men's convention which opens today at the Mayflower is this tableau of artificial mannequins. Three Chester Hale dancers, Eleanor Carroll, Virginia Howe and Marjorie Dunleavy, pose with the mannequins to show that there isn't so much difference between flesh and blood beauty and the imitation—at least as far as appearances goes.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Scarcely a White House press conference passes without some delicate compliment by President Roosevelt for the press. His most fragrant bouquets are saved for columnists and publishers. He draws a rather fine distinction between publishers, as unregenerate, and editors, as merely fallible mortals.

* * * *

That seems to leave the reporters who are face to face with the President in a favored position, except when F. D. R. uses his favorite journalistic bon mot, in response to a question with a little English on it: That depends on which paper you're writing for. Even though the reporters are calloused, this hurts a little. But they nurse their wounds and smile at the President's ingenuous assumption that this makes any difference.

* * * *

All this is flavored with a tasty sauce of amiability, democratic good-fellowship and high spirits. The President's wit is rough and ready and resourceful. He calls many of the scribes by their first names. The prevailing weather in the oval office permits them an occasional half-smothered retort or wisecrack—with which he more than holds his own. He enjoys giving the press an occasional ducking.

Behind this typically American facade, however, there is a deep and serious rift between the Government and the press, a smouldering warfare which breaks out one day at the White House, another day at the Capitol, and intermittently in other Government offices and whenever a New Dealer snuggles up to a microphone.

* * * *

I think it is fair to say that the Administration with honest suspicion resents anything less than a 100 per cent favorable press. Convinced of the holiness of its goals, it regards as sinister not only editorial criticism by editors and columnists, but also suspects the motives behind the prominent publication in the news columns of critical utterances by the Republican opposition, or the opposition inside the Democratic party. It is odd when politicians refuse to concede that the press has as high an ethical standard as their own.

* * * *

From there it is only a step to the belief that all published criticism is distortion and unfairness. This step some of the New Dealers have already taken. The danger of such a position can not be exaggerated, and wise publishers are leaning over backward to convince the New Dealers that this belief is a mistaken one.

* * * *

Two of the New Deal's most valuable and competent Senators, Minton, of Indiana, and Schwellenbach, of Washington, have taken the press problem under their wings, as the Torquemada and Savonarola of a pious crusade. Both of them are likable, diligent and conscientious. But they have adopted the view of some misguided laymen, that a newspaper commits every murder it reports in its news columns. After all, the screams of the opposition are intrinsically more exciting news than the hosannas of the New Deal. Lowell Mellett could tell his New Deal colleagues, as an ex-editor, that a tirade peps up Page One more than a sermon.

What irks the Washington reporters is that intelligent men like Minton and Schwellenbach, bitter about the flagrantly unfair news policies of a few newspapers (like those which called the reorganization bill the "dictator" bill) attempt to tar all 2,000 daily papers with the same brush . . . Many of these reporters feel that the American press paved the way for liberal reforms long before the New Deal was born; long before the radio appeared. . . . What alarms me, of course, is that if the New Dealers abuse the Press too much, readers won't even believe the nice things printed about the current regime, such as the polls printed everywhere about how popular Mr. Roosevelt is.

* * * *

Another provocation is the scornful retort of New Dealers to much criticism: "Yes, we know you agree with our goals but don't like our methods" . . . Most Washington reporters and columnists do agree with most New Deal goals. But they reserve the right to discuss the New Deal methods; and most of them feel that the most divine aims can not be accomplished by dubious methods at a headlong pace.

* * * *

Each side in this widening schism between the press and the Roosevelt Administration feels it is a blameless white knight in shining armor, leveling a lance for The People . . . It would do no harm if the Government substituted a little expert advice from able newspapermen like Steve Early, Marvin McIntyre, Mike Strauss, William Allen White, Charlie Michelson, Barry Bingham or Lowell Mellett for some of its amateur press advisers.

Display Men Open Parley In D.C. Today

Window display advertising experts from over the Nation began arriving in Washington yesterday for the forty-first annual convention of the International Association of Display Men, which opens today at the Mayflower Hotel. The convention will end Wednesday with a business meeting and election of officers, and the board of directors will meet Thursday morning.

The exhibit of display materials covers four floors at the Mayflower and is insured for $1,500,000. Hotel officials said it is the largest ever held there, and will be open to the public tonight from 8 to 11 o'clock. A picture-display contest, with 3,500 photographs, will be on exhibition.

Judges of the contest, in which prizes were awarded to winners in 80 classes and eight sweepstakes divisions, were J. B. McCann, display manager of S. Kann Sons Co.; O. D. Grimes, of the Palais Royal, and W. C. Bowman, of Woodward & Lothrop. No local stores were entered.

Today's program will begin at 9 a. m. with W. A. Gray, president of the National Capital Display Club, chairman for the day. Addresses at the morning session will be made by Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce; Erwin A. Hiffman, president of the I. A. D. M.; F. Raymond Johnson, president of Bonwit Teller Co., Philadelphia; Howard Ketcham, of New York City; C. E. Staudinger, vice president of Sherman K. Ellis Co., Inc., New York City, and Frank Spaeth, vice president of W. L. Stensgaard & Associates, Chicago. The invocation will be by the Rev. Howard Snyder.

This afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock, delegates will visit Arlington Cemetery, where President Hiffman will place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. A tour of Washington and nearby historic spots will follow, delegates returning to Washington from Mount Vernon by steamer.

Tonight will be featured by a reception and entertainment and, at 8 o'clock, a motion picture, "Over the Counter and Off the Shelf."

W. A. Gray of Lansburgh and Brothers, is directing the convention, assisted by Louis A. Banks of the Hecht Co., and McCann. Committeemen are O. D. Grimes, registration; John L. King, publicity; W. L. Wardrip, speakers; James Styles, decoration and special equipment; L. G. Gregory, entertainment, and W. L. Bowman, convention exhibits.

Local churches of the Lutheran faith held special services recalling Sweden's part in the building of America yesterday, on the eve of tercentenary fetes in Delaware and Pennsylvania.

Highlight of the observance was the program given last night at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, where the principal speaker, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, declared that "religious freedom, prohibition of slavery and fair dealing with the Indians were among the greatest contributions Sweden has made toward American progress."

"Religious liberty did not come from New England," he asserted, "for in no little degree it was a result of those fine principles exemplified in the lives of a group of Swedish settlers." These same settlers, he said, in their square dealing with the Indians, set an example of honesty for future generations to follow.

Self-Sacrifice Urged.

Several Swedish-Americans participated in the service, among them Arthur O. Hjelm, pastor of the Augustana Church; the Rev. L. M. Holling, of North Dakota; the Rev. O. H. Bostrom, of Michigan; John Nordberg, of Reformation Church, who sang a Swedish song. The Rev. Ralph W. Loew and Dr. John Weidley also assisted.

Guest preacher at the Augustana Lutheran Church, where the Crown Prince of Sweden and his party will worship next Sunday, the Rev. Ralph Peterson, of St. Paul, Minn., pleaded for a "return to the self-sacrificing spirit of the martyrs if true discipleship would be realized."

"The church in America has not been challenged like the church in Germany and Russia," he declared. Adding that "the day is coming, however," he asked: "Will the spirit of the martyr be in evidence when your discipleship is challenged?"

Dr. Arthur O. Hjelm presided over the service, which was attended by scores of visitors on their way to the Tercentenary, one of the features of which will be the All-Lutheran Festival in Convention Hall, Philadelphia, Tuesday night. Dr. Hjelm is on the program committee.

Hanson Praised.

A settler of Swedish descent, John Morton, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and cast the deciding vote for Pennsylvania, the Rev. Henry Manken told his parishioners yesterday at Incarnation Lutheran Church. He also praised the accomplishments of John Hanson, another Swede, first president under Articles of Confederation, and the Rev. John Campagnius, first translater of Luther's catechism into the Indian language.

At St. Paul's Lutheran Church, in Chevy Chase, Dr. Harry T. Domer, vice president of the congregation, read a letter addressed to the King of Sweden, felicitating him on his eightieth birthday, and lauding the country's part in America's development. American, Swedish and Finnish flags were displayed in the processional, in which a cross was carried by Howard Randall.

150,000 Flee to Cool Beaches On Third Day of Heat Wave

20,000 Throng Washington Zoo; 15,000 Motorists Visit Hains Point; Showers and Cooler Forecast for Today.

Although overcast skies threatened rain yesterday, nearby beaches and resorts reported the season's biggest crowds, as Washington's three-day heat wave continued with a high of 92 at 4 p. m. Maximum temperatures during the hot-weather siege have averaged 91 degrees with above-normal humidity prevailing most of the day.

Estimates of crowds thronging nearby Maryland and Virginia beaches ranged from 75,000 to 150,000.

Washington Zoo officials estimated about 20,000 persons visited the place during the day, while park police reported upward of 15,000 autos had motored to Hains Point. Large numbers of visitors were also reported in Rock Creek Park and local swimming pools and parks.

The names of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, were found yesterday in a diary attributed to John R. Hite, arrested in Ardmore, Pa., as a suspect in the Washington "dinner-hour" burglaries.

Other Washington names in the list were those of Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, daughter of the former Hungarian Minister, and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, wife of the president of the National Geographic Society.

Hite will be arraigned tonight in the lower magistrate's court at Lower Merion Township, Pa. Police believe that his arrest may solve a series of jewel robberies in exclusive residential section of Washington.

League Hails Extension of Civil Service

'Greatest Forward Step' Since Original Law, Johnson Says.

President Roosevelt's executive order placing 130,000 Federal employes under the Civil Service was called "one of the greatest forward steps in the advancement of the merit system in this country since the adoption of the original Civil Service act of 1883" in a statement yesterday by Robert L. Johnson, president of the National Civil Service Reform League.

Johnson said the President had "gone about as far in extending the merit system as existing law permits." The order, he added, is "more comprehensive than the great extensions made by Presidents Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson."

"The new executive orders will, however, not relieve the Congress of responsibility for adoption of legislation for extension of the merit system in the Federal service as recommended by the President's Committee on Administrative Management," he said. "Such legislation will be required also to make the executive orders now issued by the President permanent. The orders should encourage Congress to legislate for more complete and permanent extension of the merit system.

"While the new plan will necessarily entail considerably increased appropriations—probably double the present sum—to enable the Civil Service Commission to function adequately in carrying out the new rules, it will nevertheless be the safest and best investment that the people can make for good government. Such expenditures will prove to be real economy, since the savings which experience has shown to result from elimination of the patronage system and attraction of better personnel would far offset the added cost of administration."

Pastor Lays St. Anthony's Cornerstone

Mr. Conroy Thanks Those Who Aided Him in 'Supreme Effort.'

Before a large audience of parishioners and friends, the Rev. P. E. Conroy, pastor of St. Anthony's Parish, yesterday laid the cornerstone of the new church at 3412 Twelfth street northeast. The church building, of concrete, was completed before the cornerstone was set.

Father Conroy, in a brief address, thanked members of the parish for their co-operation in building the church, which he described as "the supreme effort of my life.

Among special guests at the ceremony were former pastors of the church, which was established in 1892, when it embraced the present parishes of St. Anthony, St. Martin, St. Francis de Sales and St. James. Pastors assisting Father Conroy were the Rev. James E. Grace, the Rev. Thomas F. Sweeney and the Rev. James Dwyer.

The cornerstone was laid at 3 p. m. after a mass at 6:30 a. m. in the church. The Rev. Joseph E. Buckley, pastor of St. Francis Xavier Parish, addressed the congregation.

Visiting church dignitaries were entertained at a banquet last night. In the cornerstone were placed a roll of the parish, a parchment bearing the names of Pope Pius XI, President Roosevelt, Archbishp Curley and Bishop McNamara, copies of daily newspapers and a document signed by all members of the clergy present and by laymen intrumental in making the new $200,000 structure possible.

Montgomery Fusion Slate Faces Doom

Republicans Opposed, Preferring to Run Straight Ticket.

By Phillip J. Austensen.

Fusion Party chances of placing a ticket in Montgomery County that has any chance of winning apparently are very slim, The Post learned yesterday. A straight Republican ticket will be placed in the field within a short time, possibly subject to a primary.

Suburban county Republicans have been strongly opposed or merely lukewarm to the Fusion Party, and action of Clay Plummer, Fusion Democratic member of the board of county commissioners, in refusing to sign the tax levy has brought their opposition to a head, important suburban Republicans made known yesterday.

The Fusion Party campaign committee is to meet tonight to select a slate of candidates it has been announced. Suburban Republicans say the ticket either will not be complete or will be too weak to be counted in the election.

Plummer for $1.40 Top.

Plummer Tuesday refused to sign the annual levy which provided for continuation of the $1.50 tax rate for the new tax year and declared flatly that he would not sign a levy which provided for a rate of more than $1.40. Republican-Fusion County Commissioner Frank H. Karn signed the levy, but organizaztion Democratic Commissioners Robert D. Hagner and Richard H. Lansdale declined after Plummer's declaration.

Hagner pointed out that law requires signatures of a majority of the board of county commissioners to be affixed by noon today. Failing this, the Governor has power to appoint a three-man commission to fix a levy and place it into effect.

Republicans charge that Plummer's action was purely a personal, political move.

Karn Displeased Plummer.

Rumor has held for some time that Plummer is displeased by the decision of Commissioner Karn to seek re-election. Political observers claim Plummer had planned that another bearing his approval would be candidate for the commissionership of the Rockville district.

Fusion campaign committee members have met for weeks without managing to break a seeming deadlock on a slate of candidates. Defection of Joseph A. Cantrel, who relinquished titular leadership of the Fusion-Democratic faction, to enter Democratic primaries as a candidate for the nomination for Representative from the Sixth Maryland District, was a major blow to the Fusion ticket arrangers.

Suburban Republicans point out the majority of successful candidates in the 1934 county elections were Republicans and most fusion candidates who came near winning were from the Republican side. Republicans captured four of six places won by the fusion ticket in the election.

They claim that a straight Republican ticket will have the support of the anti-organization Democrats, who are more opposed to the organization Democrats winning than they are anxious to win themselves.

No Demand Here for Wholesale Reissues and Revivals; Letters, Cards and Wires; Shirley to Honor Hoover at Variety; News of Theater.

EASTERN Division Manager Carter Barron, high Loewman in the Washington territory, evidently is in consonance with the view recently expressed here, with statistical backing, that in view of only a 3 per cent decrease in feature motion picture production for 1938-'39, as compared with the year 1937-'38, the exhibitor clamor for reissues and revivals of old hits is largely to be deprecated.

BELL.

One senses that Mr. Barron takes the allegations of a "film shortage" and "film hoarding"—saving the best of the current productions for fall release—with a grain of leavening about the size of the rock salt boulder the kindly husbandman customarily places in the meadow where his livestock grazes. There is an obvious reason for his distrust of the recent flurry of panicky announcements. No paucity of superior celluloid faces the Washington houses under his jurisdiction.

For instance, Mr. Barron points out that July will be ushered in at the Capitol and Palace theaters by such worthy features as Simone Simon, Don Ameche and Robert Young in "Josette", and Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney and Charles Coburn in "Lord Jeff," respectively. These are pictures that should intrigue the public fancy. But that isn't all.

As the summer months wear on, there will be coming along a likely list of Grade-A gelatins from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, including Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart in "Shopworn Angel"; Robert Taylor and Maureen O'Sullivan, sweethearts of "A Yank at Oxford," reunited in "The Crowd Roars," the "Golden Boy" of the screen; Lewis Stone and Mickey Rooney—and the rest of the Hardy family—in "Love Finds Andy Hardy," and Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Walter Pidgeon in "Too Hot to Handle," the saga of the newsreel photographer.

From Twentieth Century-Fox, the Loew houses will draw Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall and Cesar Romero in "Always Goodbye"; Tyrone Power and Alice Faye (remember "In Old Chicago?") in "Alexander's Ragtime Band," the musical autobiography of Irving Berlin; Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Jean Hersholt and Peter Lorre in "I'll Give a Million"; "Little Miss Broadway," Shirley Temple's latest, and reputedly greatest; Sonja Henie in "My Lucky Star" and the Ritz Brothers in "Straight, Place and Show."

To the Loew screens, United Artists will contribute Charles Boyer, Sigrid Gurie and Hedie Lamar, another new importation, in Walter Wanger's "Algiers;" Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Billie Burke in "The Young in Heart" and Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon in "The Cowboy and the Lady."

The Loew "split" of the Paramount features will include Joan Bennett and Randolph Scott in "The Texans," a roaring successor to "The Plainsman," "The Texas Rangers" and "Wells Fargo," and numerous others.

Perhaps it is no wonder that Mr. Barron is not worrying his head about reissues. However, if extensive reissue should become necessary sometime in the future, the above lists ought to furnish a desirable crop.

• • • •

Just a hint that "Lord Jeff," taking possession of the Palace screen on Friday, will prove to be something worth seeing is embodied in a brief note from Westwood Hills, Calif., under date of June 21, as follows:

"Dear Mr. Bell: May I thank you very, very much for your very kind remarks on Freddie's work in 'Kidnapped.' I hope you will enjoy his latest film, 'Lord Jeff' equally well. IT REALLY IS A GRAND STORY. Freddie and I send you our kind regards. Very sincerely yours, (signed) MILLICENT BARTHOLOMEW (Freddie's aunt.)"

It is always interesting to watch Freddie's screen performances, especially just now when he is passing from small boyhood into adolescence. He may be losing his treble voice, but not his ability as a remarkably poised and polished young actor.

That much-deferred luncheon, inducting J. Edgar Hoover into honorary membership in Washington's Variety Club, Tent No. 11, and all Variety clubs in the United States, finally is to be held under more exciting auspices than at first were planned. The evidence is in the form of a wire from Chief Barker A. Julian Brylawski, reading as follows:

"J. Edgar Hoover will be made honorary member of Variety Clubs at a special luncheon to be held in ballroom of Hotel Willard at 1, Monday, June 27. Shirley Temple also will be present and will make formal presentation to Mr. Hoover."

It thus comes about that we may catch a glimpse of the fabulous Miss Temple, despite all of the earlier defeated efforts occasioned by too much official business at the wrong times. Maybe, after all, it pays to be patient!

And as long as the "Department of Communications" seems to be writing most of this column, now might be as good a time as any to observe that Elmer Kenyon, eminent stentor of the theater, authority on the drama, author and college professor, postalcards, on the reverse side of a picture of the Tower Bridge, from London in these words:

"Though some 30 theaters are open here, I am not convinced yet that the plays or the acting are better than we have at home. The Lunts are a great success and that is understandable when you see some of the other things. Coward's 'Operetta' is on the same scale as 'Amphitryon,' but somehow is not getting over. My best to you for a good summer."

Probably not entirely unconsciously, Mr. Kenyon points an odd situation existing among old friends in the comparative successes of "Amphitryon" and "Operetta." Noel Coward, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne are the staunchest of pals. Miss Fontanne, so legend has it, was instrumental in tiding Mr. Coward over a bleak spot in his early career and to some extent in making his subsequent triumphs possible. In return, he wrote "Design for Living" as a starring vehicle for all three of them. It would be well within the fitness of things if "Operetta" were dividing London honors with the Lunts' fable of the gods on a night out. But that's the way show business is.

Katharine Cornell has definitely decided that "Herod and Mariamne" will be her first production next season, according to a bulletin just to hand. Her husband and director, Guthrie McClintic, sailed last week on the S. S. Ile de France to spend a week in Kent, England, in consultation with Clemence Dane, who is making the adaptation from the German play by Friedrich Hebbel.

As persistently rumored, Fritz Kortner, the distinguished German actor, has been signed to make his American stage debut in the role of Herod, opposite Miss Cornell.

Although no production date has been set, Miss Cornell and Mr. McClintic intend to start rehearsals of the play about the middle of September. Upon his return from abroad, Mr. McClintic will join his wife at their island home off the coast of Massachusetts for several weeks' vacation.

• • • •

This announcement recalls that back in 1909 William Faversham appeared in the title role of an English blank-verse drama of "Herod," with his wife, the late Julie Opp, in the role of Mariamne. One line of that play always has remained with me. Gazing at a crimson sunset, Herod spoke in these words of his lost love:

I do not know why these lines, out of all that have been listened to since, have stuck so tenaciously in my memory—but they have.

It is an unpleasant commentary upon the vagaries of the theater, incidentally, that William Faversham, one of the most popular stars of his day, should be spending the sunset years of his life in an actors' home in New Jersey. His last appearance on a Washington stage was as a member of Daniel Frohman's all-star "Actors' Fund Benefit," presented in the Belasco Theater on the night of Sunday, March 5, 1933, the night after President Roosevelt's first inauguration. Cecilia Loftus, Fannie Ward, Frances Starr, Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie, the Duncan Sisters, Leo Carrillo, Montagu Love, and a score more appeared on the same bill.

Today is the day the Tivoli Theater begins doing husbands a favor. It seems that the man of the house, out around Fourteenth street and Park road, likes to eat his dinner on time. It also appears that his wife likes to go to the movies and always has been getting home late. To remedy this situation, the Tivoli management, this day henceforth, will open its doors at 12:45 p. m., and start the first performance at 1. The wives now will have to think up a lot of new excuses.

Youthful Actor Will Play Role Of Screen Idol

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, June 26 (U.P.).—The lad with the heaviest load on his shoulders in Hollywood today is Jack Dunn, 23, who never has appeared in a movie but who has been selected as the star of "The Life of Rudolph Valentino."

All hands agree that the picture either will make him one of Hollywood's great stars—or turn him into a man without a country, scared to look a Valentino in the face. It's up to him and the fans, who still take their Valentino seriously.

Dunn, a handsome young Englishman with black hair, dark eyes and a faint resemblance to the greatest sheik of them all, said he intended to play the part of Valentino as if he were doing an historical film. He said he hoped nobody would think he was trying to impersonate the Sheik and that he'd be mighty happy if the fans would give him a little rest.

Swamped With Mail.

Since the announcement a couple of weeks ago that he would make the picture for producer Edward Small, Dunn has been inundated with thousands of letters, some charging him with sacrilege, some congratulating him on his bravery, and some offering to sell him Valentino mementoes.

"I've even been getting telephone calls from ladies who said they knew Valentino intimately and would like to know me," Dunn added. He produced a sheaf of photographs sent in by gentlemen who thought they looked like the Sheik and hence believed he had cheated them of their great chance.

"As we've got the thing doped out now," Dunn said, "we're going to start with Valentino as an Italian gardener or maybe a hotel bus boy and follow through with his life until he makes 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.' That was the film that climaxed his career, because it made him a star.

Will Dodge Libel.

"We decided also that this point would be a good place to stop our film because we believed that if we went any further we'd probably get mixed up in libel suits."

Valentino was unmarried when he made "The Four Horsemen." Soon he became rich and then he became involved in assorted marital adventures. One of his exwives, Miss Jean Acker, still is doing extra work on the movie lots.

Dunn's make-or-break film goes into production in the fall. Before he does it, he will appear in a picture called "The Duke of West Point" because Producer Small believes the customers would like to have a look at him before he dons the robes of Araby.

Dunn has been another of Hollywood's workless movie stars for the last two years, drawing a handsome salary continually, but never standing in front of a movie camera.

As Sonja Henie's skating partner, he had a world-wide reputation. In fact, Hollywood signed him up before it ever turned Sonja into a movie star.

"I went under contract to Universal to do a film called 'Hippodrome,'" he said, "but all I had to do was cool my heels while the head men argued. After 11 months of waiting, I got so tired of it that I asked for my release.

"Then I went over to Paramount at a good salary to do a picture titled 'Everybody's Girl.' This also was to be a big-time movie, but the arguments started again and I waited, and waited while nothing happened. I finally got a release there, too, and then Mr. Small signed me up. At last I think I'm going to be an actor who really does work for his pay."

Serenade

Hollywood, Calif., June 26.—In our town, where nine times out of ten, the least important make the most noise and get the largest pay, I want to tell you about one who does the most work and makes no noise whatever. He's been doing it now for 25 years. Pretty much of a record in any business — phenomenal in ours. Frank Lloyd, who's producing and directing "If I Were King," with Ronald Colman, Basil Rathbone, Frances Dee and many others.

HEDDA HOPPER

Together with the celebration of his 25 years' work will be his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary—to the same wife. People tell me there's no news value in happiness. But if this industry is to take its place beside big business, we must begin telling some of the stories which have put it there.

Frank turned out "Cavalcade," "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Wells Fargo." When he finishes "If I Were King" there won't be a thousand feet left over to throw on the cutting floor. Taking what we call a major shot—meaning a long, medium and dozens of closeups, and then pasting them together—that's unknown to Frank. His story is set before he begins. His camera moves along as easily as a baby carriage from one important character to another—all experienced actors, who can sustain a scene for half an hour if need be, instead of a minute or two.

Scenes for the next day are rehearsed the night before, so at 9 o'clock the next morning, each person knows exactly what they are going to do.

When the picture is three-quarters finished, the entire company gets a look at it, and if any actor is unhappy about his scene, he talks it over with Frank and it is retaken. "If I Were King" will be finished in eight weeks. No nonsense or bickering. Having been an actor himself he knows the importance of keeping his players and crew satisfied.

"Cavalcade" cost $1,250,000 and has grossed over $5,000,000—is still grossing. If you can count the men on the fingers of one hand to equal this record, we want to know about them. Can you?

Now the secret of Jimmy Stewart's thinness can be told. The other day Jimmy ordered a snack of lunch. Chicken soup, German pancakes, corn on the cob, asparagus and apple pie. He finished the soup, then happened to look up and spy a new brunette beauty—threw down his forg and said, "Oh, heck, haw can one eat when you can feast your eyes on a vision like that!"

If you want to see Clark Gable's face match the present he received on the "Too Hot to Handle" set the other day, just ask him why it was sent him. The gift was a pair of long, red woolen undies. America's heart throb burns the same color when he thinks of them.

Simple life under canvas. Simple, because we were back in our business—show business.

Gracie Allen's party for Mary Livingston was anything but. My eyes bulged at Mary's loot. Huge ruby and diamond double morning glory clip and a half ball shaped ring, paved with rubies. I complimented Jack on his good taste.

"I might just as well be broke as the way I am now," he said.

After dinner, which was served under canvas on the tennis court, we danced over to the swimming pool—still under a tent, warmed by huge charcoal broilers, and given the greatest entertainment I've seen in ages.

George Burns put on a show, the like of which you'll never see. Gracie was too busy hostessing to join him. You must be able to do a thing beautifully before you can burlesque it. George did both.

Graucho Marx sang "A Doctor Is a Man's Best Friend," proving that Gilbert and Sullivan's melodies are still well remembered. Fannie Brice, Ethel Merman, Frank Parker all sang. But it was Blossom Seeley's singing to Alex Templeton's accompaniment which really brought down the house. Followed by Benny Fields doing "Ti-Pi-Tin."

We couldn't get enough of them. When the Merchant of Vine street, Eddie Canter, was called upon they discovered he'd gone home to rest up for his European trip, when he'll try to bring 300 refugees out of Germany.

All this proved how hungry everyone is for flesh and blood actors. I believe the coming year will see these great entertainers drawing in the crowds again.

Hadn't seen Jack Oakie since he took off poundage. Looked like his baby brother. Mrs. Oakie is trying to persuade Ginger Rogers to go with her on a cross-country dog showing expedition. Ginger thinks she'll get more rest on the beach at Honolulu. What a sweet girl that Ginger is!

"STORM IN A TEACUP." Alexander Korda's picturization for United Artists of a play by Bruno Frank, with Anglo-Scottish version by James Bridie, featuring Vivien Leigh, Rex Harrison, Ursula Jeans, Cecil Parker and Sara Allgood, with Gus McNaughton, Edgar Bruce, Robert Hale, Winston MacPherson, Arthur Wontner, Eliot Makeham, George Pughe, Arthur Seaton, Cecil Mannering, Ivor Barnard, Cyril Smith, W. G. Fay and Scuffy. Directed by Victor Saville and Ian Dalrymple.

"Storm in a Teacup" has undergone a considerable expansion of its comic structure since it was first seen in Washington as a Theater Guild production presented on the stage of the National Theater under the title of "Storm Over Patsy."

Based on an original German play by Bruno Frank, with an Anglo-Saxion version by James Bridie, eminent Scotch playwright, this highly amusing comedy reveals in what manner the political aspirations of a self-important, small-town functionary may be unseated by seeming trivialities. A young reporter is assigned to interview the provost on important matters of government. In the absence of the owner of his paper, he writes, instead, a vigorous tirade against the provost for having impounded and condemned to death the small, mongrel pup of an Irish widow because she is unable to raise the sum necessary to pay an exorbitant license fee.

Complications are added to the perplexities of the aspiring politician by a sudden attachment of his daughter for the reporter and the provost's own amorous indiscretions. The little town of Baikie is the "teacup" in which the resultant "storm" rages. It is a storm, however, that is hilariously destructive of nothing more important than political pomposity.

On the stage, the most keenly satirical and most humorous scene was that of the trial. On the screen, two episodes have been made to take comic precedence—one is the scene in which the provost is "barked" down by an antagonistic crowd of dog lovers; the other, an even more disconcerting incident, supplied by the spectacle of a dinner party, in honor of an important party leader, being overrun by hundreds of nondescript dogs of every age and every breed.

The picture has been excellently cast by Alexander Korda, its producer. Vivien Leigh, Rex Harrison and Ursula Jeans contribute the romantic note and Cecil Parker as the crotchety provost, furnishes a convincing storm center for the disruptive implications of the title. That sturdy Irish character actress, Sara Allgood, appears again in the role of Mrs. Hegarty, the distracted owner of the dog that causes all the trouble, which she created on the stage both in London and in this country. And neither last nor least comes Scruffy, the canine member of the cast that comports himself with stellar composure—until lost in the shuffle of a few hundred others of his race. The supporting cast is one of unusual length, composed of players whose abilities fit nicely into the spirit and the Caledonian locale of the story.

The usual shorter subjects and newsreel supplement the major feature, which, while not new on the United Artists release charts, is being shown at the Little this week for the first time in Washington.

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, JUNE 27, 1938 13

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, June 26.

It appears to be simply the National League's tough luck that in a year when its status as a major league is seriously questioned, it approaches the All-Star game in foul shape.

POVICH

From this distance, the National League will be represented on July 6 at Cincinnati by the absolutely worst All-Star team that has taken the field since the midsummer classic games were inaugurated in 1933. In its year of stress the National League has less reason to expect a victory over the American Leaguers than in any previous season.

In fact, circumstances in the National League are such this season that it is doubtful if the league can dig up a moderately sized star for each position. They will have nine men on the field, but even National League supporters could hardly describe them as stars.

* * * *

The situation in the American League, however, has not changed. When Manager Joe McCarthy gets ready to select his opening line-up he can have his choice of a striking array of talent. In fact, he has at his command two full teams, each about as capable as the other.

But for Manager Bill Terry, the July 6 affair does not shape up as any "dream game." In fact for him it appears to be slightly nightmarish, because any team he places on the field figures to take a licking from the American leaguers. Terry can survey the talent in his league with a microscope and still can't find a star for each position.

* * * *

It's a horrible year for the National leaguers. While the American League big shots are still playing dazzling ball, the former stars of the National have slipped away. We need merely to look at the records.

Take, for example, the starting line-up of the National League in last year's All-Star game. Incidentally, Terry would probably give it to you gladly on the consideration only that you do not return it to him. Because this year that line-up is a pretty sour one indeed.

Aside from the pitchers and catchers, there were seven men in that starting line-up of the National League in 1937, we believe. All right then, let's see what those seven guys are doing this year. The lead-off man for Terry's club in 1937 was Paul Waner, of the Pirates. We find him now hitting a woeful .263 for the Pirates.

The next gent in Terry's 1937 batting order was the Cubs' Billy Herman. As we go to press, Herman this season is slugging the ball to all corners of the infield for an average of .259. The next fellow who batted for Terry's club in that 1937 game was the Pirates' Arky Vaughan. This year Mr. Vaughan is a .289 hitter and nothing more.

* * * *

There's still Joe Medwick, of course, and Terry's cleanup hitter of last season is pounding away at a .351 pace, but Terry will have to take almost complete consolation in the presence of Medwick. Because the fellow he relied on as his fifth-place hitter in 1937 was the Cubs' Frank Demaree. Demaree won't be in there at Cincinnati. He's hitting .268 when the Cubs let him play.

Terry had a sixth place hitter of course. He was Johnny Mize, big gun of the Cardinals in 1937. Something has happened to Mize. Also to his batting average. Right now its .265 and the Cardinals have benched him.

It wouldn't be so utterly dismal for the National Leaguers if they could count on lately-developed new talent to take the place of their former big shots, but a roam around the league reveals that new heroes are scarce indeed.

Terry will probably have to take a chance on a first-year man, Frank McCormack, of the Reds, at first base. McCormack is hitting a laudable .332. At second base, Terry doesn't have much choice at all. The best fielder in the league is Coscarart, of Brooklyn, who is hitting about .160. Terry can choose Herman, of the Cubs (.259); Kampouris, of the Giants (.224), or Gene Handley, of the Pirates (.271).

* * * *

At third base Terry will probably go it with the reformed outfielder, Mel Ott, who is hitting .313. But Ott is playing third base on the silver standard—on a dime. At shortstop, Terry doesn't have much choice either. Leo Durocher, of the Dodgers, is hitting .243; Bartell, of the Giants, is a .226 hitter this year, and Arky Vaughan isn't a very good shortstop.

Moving into the outfield, the National Leaguers can present

'Wonder Horse' Wins 13th in Row

Paris, June 26 (AP).—Nearco, hailed as the Italian wonder horse, won the million-franc Grand Prix De Paris today. It was the thirteenth straight victory for the horse owned by Frederico Tesio.

Nearco finished the 3,000 meter race at Longchamp ahead of Robert Lazard's Canot. Peter Beatty's Bois Roussel, winner of the English Epsom Derby, was third and J. E. Widener's American-owned Castel Fusano was fourth.

Double Victory.

The Mulhall Athletic Club team won a doubleheader yesterday over Livingston Heights and Bon Air, 14-7 and 9-0. Stewart and Hurrel were the winning hurlers.

Nats Score Twin Victory Over Browns

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, June 26.—Four elderly members of the Washington baseball firm—Mr. Harry Kelley, Mr. Wesley Ferrell, Mr. Aloysius Simmons and Mr. Samuel West—achieved the following results this afternoon:

The suddenly-rejuvenated quartet neatly divided tasks. Kelley and West polished off the Brownies in the first game and then Ferrell and Simmons took over. That made it unanimous in favor of the Nats.

Kelley's contributions to the opening engagement were as follows: One brilliantly-pitched ball game in which he allowed the Browns only seven hits and no runs at all after the first inning; and one three-hit batting spree on his own account.

West Breaks Tie.

His colleague, West, sort of helped out in that first game with a rollicking home run with a man on base that broke a 1-to-1 tie in the fifth inning.

In the second game, Ferrell allowed the Browns only nine hits and no runs whatsoever until the ninth inning. It was his tenth victory of the campaign.

But the standout exhibition of the afternoon was served up by the irrepressible Al Simmons, who with one swing of his bat won the second game. It was a terrific swing against Buck Newsom with the bases full in the third inning, and it sent a Newsom pitch to the top of the rightfield roof for Simmons' second home run of the day and tenth of the season. The Brownies never recovered from that blow.

Browns Start Well.

In that first game, Harry Kelley was no immediate success. In fact it appeared he was in for a dreary afternoon when the Browns staged a one-run flurry in the first inning. After Sullivan doubled off the right field wall, Kelley was shaky to the point of tossing a base on balls and two wild pitches into the proceedings, and the Browns took a 1-0 lead.

Then Kelley suddenly reformed. The old fellow, confident of his control, mixed his curves with a new-found fast ball. He didn't walk another man. Over the rest of the route, he allowed only five hits, and the Browns didn't get a single man past second base in those last eight innings. In fact, they only got two men that far.

Given a sizeable lead, Kelley was simply coasting and in the last three innings he slammed the door shut in the faces of the Browns by pitching completely hitless ball.

It took the Nats four innings to solve young Howard Mills, the sidewheeling southpaw rookie who had shut out the Yankees, 1-0, earlier in the week. They finally achieved a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning when Buddy Lewis bounced a double against the rightfield wall and dashed home on the license given him by Zeke Bonura's two-bagger over third base.

Nats Make Hay.

The sun wasn't shining but the Nats continued to make what will pass for hay in Bucky Harris' book. In the fifth inning, after Kelley had singled into leftfield personally, Sammy West, the former Brownie, walloped his third home run of the season on to the rightfield roof and

King Carl Winning 200th Game

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Here is Carl Hubbell, the "meal ticket" of the New York Giants, registering his 200th victory in the major leagues. He turned back the Chicago Cubs by a score of 5-1. Hubbell is serving up one of his fancy slants to Tony Lazzeri, former Yankee star, in the ninth inning. Harry Danning is the Giant catcher.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 26.—King Carl Hubbell, foiled three times in his bid for his 200th pitching victory, succeeded in that aim today as the Giants trounced the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 1, to increase their National League lead.

Beaten by the Cardinals, Pirates and Cincinnati Reds in his last three starts, old Squarepants pitched shutout ball until the sixth today and romped in with little difficulty. Although he gave up 11 hits, while his mates collected only 6, 4 of the New York blows came with men on the bags.

Hubbell, thus, becomes the fourth pitcher active in the game today to join the "200-win" Club. King Carl now ranks with Lefty Grove, of the Boston Red Sox; Earl Whitehill of the Cleveland Indians, and Ted Lyons, of the Chicago White Sox, in that set.

Featuring the Giants' attack off Larry French, Bill Lee and old Charley Root was a 475-foot homer inside the park by Bob Seeds, the clouting outfielder the New Yorkers brought up from Newark only two days ago. He connected off Lee in the seventh inning with a long drive to the clubhouse steps in centerfield, and before Carl Reynolds could run it down, Seeds circled the sacks.

This blow came with one on, sparking a three-run rally in the seventh which put the game beyond the Cubs' reach.

Up to then it had been close. The Giants got away in front with a pair of runs in the fourth, Sambo Leslie driving one in and Augie Galan's bad throw letting the other cross. The Cubs had come back in the sixth to bunch hits by Billy Herman, Reynolds and Gabby Hartnett for their lone tally.

Navy Crew Coach Hurt; Austen Subs

(Complete boatings of the crews appear on Page 14.)

By John D. Paulus,
Sports Editor of The Post.

With every essential of a rip-roaring movie scenario, the thirty-sixth Intercollegiate Rowing Regatta at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., will take place today in a scene laden with drama and minor tragedy.

As the wind-whipped Hudson offered last-minute threats of rough going in all three of the day's races, late developments at the scene of the event were as follows:

1. Buck Walsh, head coach of the United States Naval Academy crews, is in Vassar Brothers Hospital, Ensign M. H. (Cy) Austen wired The Post last night.
2. Rain poured over the course last night and a high wind tore through Poughkeepsie, presaging bad weather for the races.
3. A crowd of more than 80,000 is expected to be on hand with every hotel accommodation in Poughkeepsie reported taken last night.

Austin Takes Reins.

The Navy coach slipped and fell late Saturday night at a Rhinebeck, N. Y., hotel and suffered a fracture of the sacrum and a concussion of the lower part of the spinal cord The injuries will confine him to the hospital for several days.

Ensign H. M. (Cy) Austin, who rowed under Walsh in 1935, will substitute for the popular Navy mentor tomorrow. Austin sent the two boats through a light workout last night. He wired The Post that Walsh's injury would probably make all the difference in the world in a race which had been all but conceded to Washington or California.

"These Middies are going to be a tough bunch to beat now," Austin told The Post. "They visited Walsh in the hospital today and told him they would go out and win that race for him tomorrow!"

President on Hand.

President Roosevelt will attend the races for the first time since he has been in the White House. The President will be aboard the yacht Potomac, which will be anchored with the six Navy destroyers near the finish line.

Eighteen crews will row in three races. In the varsity event will be Washington, Columbia, Syracuse, California, Wisconsin, Cornell and Navy. The six crews in the junior varsity brush will be Cornell, Columbia, California, Navy, Washington and Syracuse. In the freshman test are Cornell, Columbia, Washington, Syracuse and California.

California and Washington are co-favorites at 7 to 5. Navy's odds came down from 3-1 to 2-1 as chances are seen for the first Eastern victory in the varsity since Navy won in 1931.

The Washington crew has won world-wide prominence in rowing during the last two years. Twice winners on the Hudson and, with an Olympic title to its credit, the Ulbrickson-coached crew with its All-American stroke, Don Hume, has taken all honors in sight. Hume, who is stroking his last race, has never lost in his career.

Gets New Stroke.

The first race will be rowed at 2:45 o'clock (Eastern standard time). This is the 2-mile freshman event. The junior varsity event, at 3 miles, will take place one hour later. The varsity race will climax the day's activities an hour after the jayvee brush takes place. The varsity event is over 4 miles.

The Golden Bears are given a good chance to win this year's event despite a loss to the Washington crew over a 3-mile course at Lake Washington in April. After the April race, Coach Ebright of the Bears reorganized his crew and it's a different outfit that faces the field at Poughkeepsie today.

Abright put in a new stroke, Kirkham Smith, who weighs only 165 pounds. But behind the stroke is a sextet of young giants whose average weight is better than 180 pounds.

Dodgers Tie Cards, 1 to 1

Second Game Is Halted by Downpour.

Brooklyn, June 26 (AP).—The Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals battled through nearly six innings to a 1-all tie in what was to have been the first game of a double-header today, and then had to call festivities off for the day because of rain and wet grounds.

Vito Tamulis and Fiddler McGee hooked up in a mound duel until old man weather washed out the program. Tamulis fanned six in six innings. The Dodgers were at bat in the last of the sixth, with a man on base and none out when play was halted.

Greiner Wins Md. Amateur

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Towson, Md., June 26.—The greatest streak in the history of amateur golf in this section was completed here today over the Rogers Forge course by 18-year-old Otto Greiner, of the host club, who won the Maryland State amateur championship, defeating Spencer Overton in the final by a 2 and 1 margin.

The new titleholder, succeeding Volney Burnett, was forced to the twentieth hole in the semi-finals to defeat Buddy Sharkey, Indian Spring champion, where the latter three-putted the green. Against Overton he rallied after being one down at the turn, to close the match on the seventeenth.

It was Greiner's third title in 11 days. Last week he won the medal and championship of the Middle Atlantic Golf Association at Charlottesville. Thursday he played Suburban in four under par for 36 holes to annex the Maryland junior, and the following day he won the medal in the State amateur with a 68. He has thus won eight consecutive matches and played 72 holes of medal play in four under perfect figures. He also won the Maryland Collegiate title earlier in the year.

Sharkey gave Greiner his toughest match before an erring putter threw him out of the championship. The Indian Spring youngster three-putted the first two greens and gained halves as Greiner was also over par. Sharkey went 2 up by

Lou Gehrig, Gehringer Are Picked

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 26.—The American League cast for baseball's annual All-Star game July 6 at Cincinnati was selected today and for a sixth time Lou Gehrig and Charley Gehringer, two of the game's most enduring stars, were awarded choice roles.

Every club in the junior circuit is represented on the team which will battle the National League All-Stars in the sixth annual "dream" contest. The team membership was announced by the American League president, William Harridge.

Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, of the New York Yankees, was the only pitcher named the sixth time. He had hurling assignments in all but the 1936 game.

PITCHERS—Bob Grove, Boston; Charles (Red) Ruffing, New York; Vern Kennedy, Detroit; Johnny Allen, Cleveland; Bob Feller, Cleveland; Buck Newsom, St. Louis; Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, New York.

OUTFIELDERS—Earl Averill, Cleveland; Joe Di Maggio, New York; Roger Cramer, Boston; Bob Johnson, Philadelphia, and Michael Kreevich, Chicago.

COACHES—Art Fletcher, New York, and Del Baker, Detroit; batting practice pitcher—Dave Keefe, Philadelphia; batting practice catcher—John Schute, New York; trainer—Doc Painter, New York.

The team was selected by American League managers, each of whom picked 23 players. The players receiving the largest number of votes, tabulated by the American League office, were named to the squad Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees, will lead into action. Manager Bill Terry of New York's Giants, again will pilot the National League aggregation.

Lou Was 1937 Hero.

Since the inaugural game in 1933 at Chicago, the Silent Gehringer, Detroit's great second sacker, and "Iron Man" Gehrig, Yankee first baseman, have been in the American League line-ups.

Gehrig was the No. 1 hero of last year's game won by the American Leaguers, 8 to 3, to bring their numbers of wins to four in five games. The Nationals scored their only triumph two years ago when they took a 4-to-3 decision at Boston.

Many players chosen for previous All-Star games will not be on the team at Cincinnati, even though they still are very much in baseball. Tommy Bridges and Mel Harder pitched the American Leaguers to victory a year ago but failed to make this year's team. Others who will be absent include Ben Chapman, Sam West, and Al Simmons.

A Seasoned Team.

This year's American League line-up is a seasoned one, not a single rookie being named. Ken Keltner, Cleveland's sensational young third sacker who some believed would make the grade, saw the veteran Rolfe and Buddy Lewis, of Washington get the "hot corner" call.

The junior circuit stars will have plenty of power. Averill was leading the league last week with a .384 average, and Travis, Foxx and Gehringer all were among the league's first ten batsmen. The weakest hitter, according to averages of June 23, was Gehrig, with a mark of .275. Greenberg's average was just about at the .300 mark, but the husky Tiger first sacker was tied with Foxx and York in homers, each having made 20 circuit smashes through last Friday.

On the pitching staff were three of the circuit's top ranking flingers—Allen, Grove and Feller. Under the rules, Manager McCarthy can pick his starting line-up as he chooses. Pitchers, however, are restricted to three innings, except that if extra innings are played the last pitcher working can remain in action as long as the manager wants him to.

Columbus Beats Macon.

Columbus, Ga., June 26 (AP).—Big Bill Curlee and Mack Stewart engaged in a hot pitchers' battle today as the Columbus Red Birds scored an unearned run in the eighth for a 1-to-0 victory over the Macon Peaches.

Abrams Fights Furr for D. C. Middleweight Title Tonight at Stadium

The Punchline

By Lewis Atchison.

Marty Gallagher, currently tending bar at Tom 'Donnell's Griffith Farms establishment, will begin a month of strenuous training today to determine the feasibility of attempting a comeback against Tony Galento in September. We got it straight from Tom himself, who is currently matching alligators, eels and catfish in the window trough of his cocktail lounge on E street.

ATCHISON.

If, at the end of that period, the bashful Foggy Bottom basher feels he can give "Two Ton" trouble over the 15-round route, he'll sign articles for a bout to be staged in New Jersey. If the workouts reveal that Martin isn't what he used to be, he'll rip off the gloves for keeps and confine his punching to the cash register.

The match could be advertised as the "Battle of Bartenders," although Gallagher, unlike Galento, dislikes anything stronger than double-rich chocolate milk shakes. The guy would even trade a gallon of bottled-in-bond rye for a double order of home-made custard. This, of course, reveals that his newspaper education has been sadly neglected.

* * * *

The very mention of Gallagher and Galento suggests their two stirring duels at the stadium in which they broke even. A third match might smash all existing District boxoffice records. Marty has been a big boxoffice magnet since his epic bout with Henry Lamar at Silver Spring some years ago which grossed $10,000. Galento only recently has risen to prominence in the world of pugilism, and is an attraction in any park because he is one of the few heavyweights operating today who figure to give Joe Louis the least bit of trouble.

Detective Sergt. Dick Cox, an expert Indian club swinger, was telling us the story of how Goldie Ahearn got his ring name the other night, and it's a howl.

Cox at the time was a fireman stationed at No. 4 Truck Co. on M street at New Jersey avenue northwest. Goldie lived in the neighborhood and both being interested in boxing, they struck up a lively friendship. Cox imparted the finer points of boxing to Goldie (nee Isadore Goldstein) and finally agreed to get a match for him.

At that time it was customary for all contracts to be signed in newspaper offices in the presence of the sporting editor, and "Hip" Dugan, then sports editor of The Post, was the man they came to for the ceremony. Dugan, good newspaperman that he was, balked at the name of Goldstein. It wouldn't fit well in any standard head, and he suggested finding a briefer name for Goldstein. It was he who thought of calling the boy Goldie Ahearn.

The Post, the following morning, carried the announcement that Goldie Ahearn would make his professional debut in a certain preliminary bout. It was the bout Cox promised to get for Goldie, but when Ahearn saw the new name, he failed ot recognize it.

"You're a fine pal," he exploded. "You said you were gonna get me a spot on the card and they got some punk called Goldie Ahearn fighting in my place. Well, you wait and see what he does. He won't draw a bag of peanuts, and I hope he gets knocked out."

A Tommy Farr-Buck Everett match is brewing . . . Farr and Maury Strickland will fight it out for the Empire (British, of course) heavyweight title at Toronto next month . . . Natie Brown almost got the shot at Farr when Bill Daly, Strickland's manager, balked at the original terms . . . Daly, incidentally, is an old lightweight who once boxed Goldie Ahearn . . . (this is getting to be an Ahearn column) . . . Al Reid vs. Leo Rodak is being plotted for the stadium August 1 . . . it will be a welcome relief from George Abrams vs. Another Stumblebum . . . Lou Gevinson is threatening a comeback . . . not in Washington, we hope.

Don't put too much stock in this investigation of Jimmy Adamick's victories . . . the Detroit heavyweight is piloted by Jack Kearns who believes one way to build up a fighter is to involve him in scandal . . . to a certain degree . . . remember Jack Dempsey's famed "war slacker" case? . . . Tommy Loew (retired) veteran lightweight, used to get his excellent footwork waltzing . . . his friends would try to bump him during the dance, but Tommy would glide gracefully away.

Harry Raskin is currently holding forth at Jimmy Braddock's Inn, New York . . . he insists on ribbing Jack McCarthy, Braddock's sparring partner, by walking up and asking, "Will you please autograph my menu, Mr. Braddock?" . . . he usually gets at least a dozen out-of-towners to follow suit, which is the cause of McCarthy's complaint . . . Braddock's, incidentally, is the most popular ring rendezvous in New York . . . Dempsey's is dying a slow death because of the frigid atmosphere and skyscraper prices . . . at Braddock's the former champion greets you with a warm hand . . . all of the big "names" in boxing can be found there.

Jimmy Lake was a gracious host to Washington newspapermen at Braddock's after the late and unlamented Schmeling-Louis fight, and insisted on making a speech . . . they finally brought him a soapbox . . . Jim, by the way, is still tops as an announcer after listening to the cut and dried bellowing at the championship tussle.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With both parties as confident of victory as a Pennsylvania politician on election eve, Phil Furr and George Abrams meet tonight in the Griffith Stadium battle-pit to decide the District middleweight championship over a 10-round route.

Some 8,000 fans are expected to witness the fisticuffing, which should produce more excitement than a loose ball in an Army-Navy grid game, and which will determine the gladiators' ultimate place in the local puglistic scheme. The winner has been promised a shot at a top-ranking fighter later in the season, and the loser automatically fades from the picture.

Abrams, a 10-to-9 choice with the betting fraternity, is conceded an excellent chance of upsetting his highly touted opponent largely on the strength of his unexpected decision over Teddy Yarosz. The northeast youngster is making a good comeback after being belted out by Jimmy Jones, and seems destined to go a few notches higher in the middleweight class.

Crowd Wants Knockout.

Although the crowd is hoping for a knockout, few expect Abrams to deliver one, for he is a notoriously feeble puncher. He can outpoint Furr, but hardly stretch the transplanted "Foggy Bottom" ace on the canvas. Furr appears to have too much experience.

Abrams intends to employ the same plan of battle he used so successfully against Yarosz. He'll come out swinging with the first bell, and keep punching until the last—or as long as he remains in an upright position. There are some who hold that Furr's potent right will lull Georgia to sleep before the debate is five rounds old. Wagering on such a hasty termination is light, but sufficient to indicate the esteem with which Furr is held.

In Furr, Abrams will not encounter a stiff-legged veteran of Yarosz's type, but a cool, crafty campaigner who has fought them all and given a good account of himself. Abrams may rush in to him, as he did against Yarosz, and bump into a flurry of leather that will rock him to his heels. If he lays back Furr will not tear after him, exposing his chin to unnecessary punches, but wait for an opening for a killing shot.

In a word, Furr moves around and utilizes his speed afoot and boxing skill to best advantage. Abrams can lead and set the pace, if he elects to, but it's a safe prediction that he'll fight the way Furr wants him to fight.

Furr Not Troubled.

Abrams will have an appropriate weight advantage of 12 pounds at ringside after weighing in at the stipulated figure of 158 pounds at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Furr will not go much over 147, his normal weight. Phil benefited greatly by the week's delay caused by last week's postponement, while Adams has been troubled with excess avoirdupois. George ever went so far as to be excused from weighing in again.

There was that little matter of gloves, too, which Chris Dundee, Furr's pilot, raised a row over two weeks ago. The mittens were exhibited to both factions last Monday, stamped and sealed after being pronounced acceptable, and will not be unpacked until thrown into the ring tonight.

The preliminaries, starting at 8:30 o'clock, include El Brookman vs. Joey Spangler, six rounds; Angelo Puglisi vs. Buddy Thomas, six rounds; Kid Bowie vs. Jimmy Street, four rounds, and Jack Larimore vs. Don Rogers.

It's quite a contrast from the slugging outfit that Joe McCarthy can put on the field. Quite a contrast from Jimmy Fox (.338) at first base; Charley Gehringer (.333) at second base, Buddy Lewis (.301) or Red Rolfe (.298) at third base and Cecil Travis (.364) or Joe Cronin (3.21) at shortstop.

And in his outfield McCarthy doesn't have to pick anything less than a .324 hitter unless he chooses to put in Joe DiMaggio (.314) which any manager probably would chose to do. With DiMaggio there would be Earl Averill (.390) and Joe Vosmik (.329) or Peter Fox (.324).

Time was when the National Leaguers would concede that the American League would outslug 'em, and in the same motion point to the National League's pitching as the great leveler. But there can be little pride taking in the National League's pitching this season after Johnny Vander Meer is mentioned.

Carl Hubbell, the old war horse, lost his last three starts until today and except for Vander Meer there isn't a stand-out pitcher in the league. The American Leaguers can toss Lefty Grove (11 and 2), Johnny Allen (9 and 1) and Bob Feller (8 and 2) in there and go townward!

Phils Split With Reds

Take First Game, 10-3, and Lose Nightcap, 8-5.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 26.—The Phillies and Reds divided a doubleheader here today before 8,500 fans. The Phils won the first game, 10-3, behind the steady pitching of Claude Passeau who stuck to the finish despite 14 Red hits. Cincinnati took the second game, 8-5, Paul Derringer's tenth victory of the year.

In the first game the Phils knocked big Jim Weaver out of the box in the third inning to pile up five runs. In the second game the Reds picked on Wayne La Master to take an early lead and Derringer, although in difficulty, managed to hold the advantage.

Lonnie Frey, of the Reds, and Baxter Jordan, of the Phillies, each had eight hits during the day, while Klein, Weintraub and Craft hit homers.

Dr. Owens won the Spring Tournament at the Service Club by defeating R. G. Rogers on the final green. Maj. Dillon clinched the Newman Trophy with rounds of 77-81—158 and deducting a combined 18 handicap for 140. W. S. Popham, with 77-79, 158—8, 148 was second.

CAPITAL.

Billy Houghton scored 18 consecutive pars over the Glen Echo layout but it was all in vain as he and his partner, Ed Fox, lost to Ken Spencer and A. J. Arnold in the two-man team play, 2 and 1. Frank White, finishing two down to par, with a 72—1, 71, won the match play against par event, while Allen Laing, R. W. Pasche and J. Phelen tied for second, each three down.

Other matches in the two-man team play included Phelan and Dr. Peter Grew, winning 3 and 1 over E. M. Hunter and D. C. Rittenhouse; Pendergast and A. Mike Schaeffer, Stanley Pranker and H. W. Woodholme were playing with Smith.

Local Linkswomen Oppose Philadelphia

The District Women's team that resumes an old intercity rivalry with Philadelphia linkswomen on Wednesday was named yesterday by Mrs. N. J. Waldron, team captain.

Several of the higher ranked golfers were unable to make the trip, thus the line-up is not representative of the true strength of the local women golfers, who defeated Baltimore this season, 12 to 6, with a patched line-up.

The match will be played over the Overbrook course Wednesday morning, while the team will be feted Tuesday night at the Gulph Mills course. Mrs. R. W. Payne, president of the Women's District Golf Association, and Mrs. N. J. Waldron will accompany the team.

Helen Dettweiler, Congressional, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, will play the No. 1 twosome of the Quaker City team, expected to be Mrs. Glenne Collett Vare, and partner, while District Champion Marion Brown, Manor, will play with Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, in the second spot. Other twosomes, in order, include Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, and Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor; Mrs. George Hussey, Army and Navy, and Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional; Mrs. Howard J. Simons Manor, and Miss Kate Hyde Scully, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. J. W. Ludewig, Army and Navy, and Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam.

Pro-Amateur Carded At Clifton Park

It is the first of two scheduled pro-ams this week, the other on Thursday at Chevy Chase, a combination pro sweepstakes, pro-amateur, amateur and handicap event, with play in three classes. Professionals will play with three amateur partners.

Meyer Favored Today In District Junior

Dick Meyer played his home Manor course in 74-70 yesterday, including a 5-5 finish on the last two holes of the second round after playing 16 holes in three under par, to step into the favorite's role in the District junior championship starting today at Manor.

Eighteen youngsters, under 18 years of age, will seek Ralph Bogart's title and the Albert MacKenzie trophy. Bogart is over the age limit. Earl Skinker, Columbia, and Bob Donohue, Kenwood, are prominent entries.

Savage Wins From Friend

Takes Trans-Miss. Crown From Best Pal.

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Neb., June 26.—A drive sent whistling out of bounds by Ed Kingsley from the thirty-ninth tee provided the opening which gave Ven Savage, 27-year-old Salt Lake City golfer, a one up victory over his fellow townsman and the Transmississippi golf championship today.

Kingsley's shot, which enabled his buddy to win the hole with a par four, broke up one of the longest and most thrilling finals in Trans history, a match teeming with sensational putts and spectacular rallies, and in which par took a thorough beating.

Three down at the end of 27 holes, Kingsley came down the stretch like a whirlwind. He collected four straight birdies to even the match on the thirty-third, went one down again on the thirty-fifth, then squared it up again on the thirty-sixth with a par. His card for the home nine of the afternoon round read 33 strokes, three under par.

Both obviously nervous, they scrambled for their pars on the thirty-seventh, and Kingsley scrambled for his par and a halve on the thirty-eighth. Then came the wayward tee shot with Savage in the rough, but in bounds. His second was on the green, 20 feet from the pin. Kingsley's third was 30 feet away. His putt stopped a foot short of the pin, and when Savage put his just a foot from the hole, it was all over.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Harry Kelley, Al Simmons and Wesley Ferrell garner 16 of the 20 points awarded in the Man of the Month contest in yesterday's victorious double bill with the St. Louis Browns. Simmons' five points gave him a total of 26 and the lead, while Buddy Lewis, with one point, was as many behind.

To Harry Kelley, six points, the second highest award made in a single game of the contest, for not only did he pitch eight innings in masterful fashion after a shaky start, allowing only seven hits over the route and retiring nine in a row the last three innings, but he hit safely three times, scored twice and batted in two runs. It was a great individual performance.

To Sammy West, two points, for batting in three runs with one of two home runs of the day, a double, and three runs batted in.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, for scoring the tying run after doubling in the fourth, and batting in two runs.

To Wes Ferrell, five points, for a fine pitching performance, including shutout ball for eight innings and allowing only three scratchy hits for the first six innings.

D. C. Canoe Club Victor

Keeps Middle States Title at Philadelphia.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 26.—The Washington Canoe Club retained its Middle States canoe championship for the fourth year here today on the storm-swept Schuylkill, although it was tied by the Yonkers Canoe Club, national champion, at 41 points.

Washington would have won the meet, even had Yonkers outscored it, for the New York team was ineligible to compete for the Middle Atlantic championship due to the fact that it is in the Atlantic States division.

While Ernie Riedel of Pendleton C. C., New York, was the leading individual winner with three triumphs, he received plenty of competition from Washington's Bill Havens for high-scoring honors.

Havens won the intermediate one-man singles blades and the intermediate one-man doubles blades, as well as paddling on the second-place intermediate tandem doubles blades with Vollmer and teaming with Rhodes on the second-place senior canoe-tilting duo.

The Capital City duo of Ward Fishardy and Billi Johnson took the junior tandem single blades, Ken Romiou and Johnson were second in the junior tandem doubles blades, Harry Knight and Ebby Trilling were second in the senior tandem double blades and Knight, Ached, Vollmer and Trilling finished in runner-up position in the senior quad single blades.

Snead Wins Goodall Golf

Cincinnati, June 26.—Sam Snead came from behind with an amazing rush today to win the first $5,000 Goodall Invitational Tourney with a 3-foot putt on the second hole of a play-off with Gene Sarazen.

Snead, who started the day even in the complicated plus-and-minus scoring of the round-robin, steadily cut down the big lead which Henry Picard had piled up in the first 90 holes of play. Picard had a 16-plus rating as the last 36 of the scheduled 126 holes of play started.

The victory gave Snead the $1,000 top prize. He was five up on Tommy Armour and four upon Ed Dudley in the morning round and three upon Lawson Little and two up on Jimmy Thomson in the afternoon.

Sarazen, who had a plus-nine rating as the day started, came to the final hole with plus-15, one ahead of Snead. Sarazen needed only to halve the final with Ralph Guldahl, National Open and Western Open champion, and Harry Cooper to win the tournament.

But he two-putted while Guldahl blasted out of a trap for par and Cooper took a birdie three, halving with Guldahl but dropping his winning margin to Cooper.

Pirates Beaten.

With McGuinn hurling great ball, the Ramblers A. C. defeated the Pirates A. C., 11-1, in a tilt played on the Third and Sheridan streets diamond yesterday.

Sandlot Pick-ups

The sixth annual National City-wide Columbian Athletic League Tournament has a fast-stepping nine by the name of the Arlington Athletic Club which has attracted unusual attention by its brilliant play . . . But this outstanding group of former high school athletes may have to disband before entering the finals . . . The reason . . . It is sorely in need of a sponsor . . . Any business organization that is interested in keeping a fine squad of players together should get in touch with Ray Hamilton immediately . . . Call Alexandria 6548 or write to 2812 Wilson boulevard, Arlington, Va.

* * * *

Tom Simpson, considered one of the best shortstops in local schoolboy circles, who played for the Washington-Lee aggregation during the past season; and Hal Leatherwood, of the same school, who lead the Northern Virginia League in hitting, are members of the Arlington team . . . Homer Sprinkle, a hard-hitting second baseman, who was taught his baseball at the Little Generals institution; and Albert Morris, ace Washington-Lee hurler, are also giving their services to a nine that any sponsor should be glad to handle . . .

* * * *

Ray Homan, who used to be the regular third baseman for the Union Printers' team, of the Industrial League, is now doing the catching for his club . . . And if all reports are true, Homan has developed into a first-class receiver . . . In fact, because of his recent exhibitions of hard hitting, heady playing, and his ability to direct team play and encourage his chums during the heat of battle, many sandlot fans have nominated him as their No. 1 backstop.

O'Donnell's Sea Grill nine, which won the first-half Industrial League title with eight wins against a lone defeat, has only three former college stars in its regular line-up . . . They are Tom Nolan, of Georgetown University; Joe Crisafui and George Wood, of Maryland University . . . But you have missed a treat if you have not seen them perform.

Crown Won By Greiner

Two birdies and a par on the next three holes put Greiner up for the first time, but his opponent squared the issue on the short thirteenth. Greiner then won the next two holes of the see-saw battle but dropped 16 and 17 to a birdie and par and they were even at the last hole.

A gallery of 1,000 followed the young linksmen as they halved the eighteenth and nineteenth holes, and as Greiner entered the last round by winning the twentieth as Sharkey three-putted, missing a putt of less than 2 feet.

Overton, champion in '36 and finalist last year, faced Greiner in the first all-Baltimore final since 1932, and the newest sensation of the local golfing world, stern and poker-faced as usual, was two over par for the 17 holes he required to force Overton into the runner-up hole for the second consecutive year.

Both out in 37, Overton was one up, but the very same holes he used to gain the advantage in the morning, 10-11 and 12, Greiner won in the afternoon to take the lead. Overton, like Sharkey, won the thirteenth to go one down, but he lost 14 and they halved the remaining holes through the seventeenth.

Greiner was four over par for the 37 holes of play as he added his name to the all-time links greats of this section, the Johnny Vander Meer of the Middle Atlantic golfing world.

C. Henry Cohen, Capital Club representative, gained the only victory of the Washington delegation by winning the fourth flight. Ernie Caldwell, former State champion, won the second and William Duke, Mount Pleasant, the third.

Greiner lost to Burnett in the second round of the State tournament last year at Manor. He has been touted for the past two years by links followers of the Oriole city as a "comer," and today he more than fulfilled their predictions. He is a brother of Walter Greiner, assistant professional at Woodholme.

Washington Net Player Is Victor

Mountain Lakes, N. J., June 26 (AP). Charles Channing, of Washington, D. C., a member of the University of Virginia squad, turned in the first upset of the sixth annual Mountain Lakes Invitation tennis singles tournament today when he whipped fifth-seeded John Dietz, of Summit, 6—3, 5—7, 6—0, in a third round match.

Two seeded players won second round matches before rain halted play. John Curtis, of Ithica, N. Y., runner-up last year and ranked No. 3, defeated Frank Rosenbaum, of New York City, 6—4, 6—3, and George Dunkin, of Pine Bluff, Ark., blanked H. B. Lee, of Mountain Lakes, 6—0, 6—0.

Dairy Nine Wins, 5-3; Takes Lead

By Perry Wilkinson.

Behind the five-hit pitching of Jack DeBettencourt, who has started and finished five consecutive games this season, the Fairfax Farms Dairy nine moved into first place in the National City League A race by downing the Market Pharmacy team, 5-3, on the East Ellipse yesterday.

Rose Liquor's aggregation, which has held the top position for several weeks, lost to Klein's Tavern, 7-3. It was Rose's first defeat of this season.

Eddie Smith, Mac Luebkert and Charles Russel smacked a brace of hits apiece to lead the Dairy attack, while F. Coakley slammed a homer to feature the Pharmacy offensive.

In the Klein's-Rose Liquor engagement, Bill Liggett did a masterful job on the mound in stopping a team that had won five straight. In knocking Booker, Roses' ace hurler, from the mound, Klein's collected 13 hits—every man on the team getting at least one except Liggett.

The only other League A tilt saw the Atlantic & Pacific team lose to the No. 4 Police Boys, 2-9, on the No. 10 West Potomac field.

First-half League B honors were clinched by Read's Pharmacy as Noland Supplies forfeited, 9-0. Read has won seven straight against no defeats. The second-half schedule gets under way July 10.

The Bethesda Juniors remained on top in the National City Junior League by defeating Deoudes Celery, 8-6. Morell and Norris, Bethesda hurlers, allowed only two hits, as F. Mizell and Sills were leading the attack. Jack Redinger, all-high flinger, was the losing pitcher. Nick Bombard stopped Coffey Screen, 6-2, and the No. 4 and No. 10 Police Boys tied, 4-all, to round out the junior games.

A big six-run sixth inning rally that found Hymie Perlo smacking a home run, was enough to give Blue Ribbon Bakery a 9-5 win over the No. 11 Police Boys. This fourth straight Bakery victory places it well out in front in the Midget League.

A triple play—the first recorded—featured Sergeant Jasper's win over the Police nine, 7-2, in the American Legion. Police had a man on first and second with no one out in the ninth frame. Leonard Sokol, Jasper leftfielder, made a spectacular catch, and when both men advanced, thinking the ball was far over Sokol's head, he whipped the ball to Second Baseman Lagos, who relayed it to First Baseman Burke. In other games, Nash nosed out Agriculture, 9-8; Fort Stevens defeated Cooley McCoullogh, 13-5, and Costello trounced Pepco, 10-3.

In the opening of the Fraternal Softball League, which was witnessed by 1,000 spectators and has about 5,500 members, the S. A. K. Club, with Goldstein and Dennison whacking home runs, walloped the A. Z. A. Club, 16-3. With Norman Freedenberg allowing three hits and striking out 9, B'rai B'rith trounced the Gomper's Masonic crew, 8-3. Reservoir Club downed District, 7-4; Progress defeated Amity, 14-6, and Benjamin Franklin eked out a 4-3 win over the Jewish War Veterans.

Off Day for Nats; MeetSoxTomorrow

En Route to Boston, June 26.—An off day confronts the Nats tomorrow, while on Tuesday they open a three-game series with the third place Boston Red Sox in Boston, and could jump a notch in the standings by a clean sweep. They trail by 2 games.

The day's double win over the Browns moved the Griffmen above the .500 mark for the trip, with six victories and five defeats. Dutch Leonard is the probable pitching choice of Manager Harris in the Bosox opener.

Hornsby Signs With Chattanooga

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 26 (AP). Rogers Hornsby, one of baseball's all-time greats, was named manager of the Chattanooga Lookouts, of the Southern Association, today. The announcement was made by Joe Engel, club president.

Hornsby has served as coach for the Baltimore Orioles this year, occasionally taking his place in the line-up as a pinch hitter.

Emil Dusek Matched With Savoldi's Cousin

Another Dusek yesterday was added to the wrestling card featuring Joe Dusek and Danno O'Mahoney, former world's champion, at Griffith Stadium Thursday night.

He is Emil Dusek.

Circulators Win.

In a 12-inning ball game played on the Takoma Park field, the Washington Post Circulators nosed out the Takoma Athletic Club nine, 5-4, yesterday. Jim Dennis allowed but 4 hits and struck out 12, while Stringy Donovan got 4 hits in 4 trips to the plate to lead the winners' attack.

Demand Jumps Stock Averages 6.6% in Week

Technical Explanations Fail to Account for Abrupt Advance.

By Edward H. Collins,
A Special Correspondent.

New York, June 26.—In the disorganized decline of stocks last summer we witnessed a striking example of what can happen when any substantial volume of selling makes its appearance in a thin market. Last week we were treated to a glimpse of the reverse side of the picture. With the impact of the first serious demand for securities that has come into the market in months, prices soared almost perpendicularly.

On a week's turnover of 10,112,140 shares—a volume that is sensational only when measured by standards of recent months—the 100 stocks on which the averages are based advanced, without a day's interruption in the movement, from 94.44 to 101.04, a net gain for the week of 6.60 points. Not in nearly three entire months of trading previously had prices moved over as wide a range.

If the thinness of the market was the chief reason for the violence of the week's advance it was not, of course, the only factor making for such violence, nor does it obviously explain why the market turned about in the first place.

Explanations.

As always on such occasions the street had numerous, simple, pat, explanations on tap. These ranged all the way from the theory that the buying was "inspired from Washington" to the more substantial and sensible explanation that technical market considerations and the outlook for a fall improvement in trade were the most important considerations in turning the market almost overnight from one of the dullest to one of the most exciting in months.

As a matter of fact, there rarely is any one explanation for such an episode as that recorded in last week's stock market. This type of phenomenon is usually the explosive result of cumulative forces, and of itself is apt to be primarily emotional, rather than rational. One can, however, set down a number of considerations which undoubtedly entered the speculative mind during and just before last week to exercise, consciously or unconsciously an optimistic influence on its judgment of values. Prominent among these would have to be listed the following:

1. Numerous straws had for some weeks pointed to a cessation of deflation in prices and in business. Thus, Moody's index of sensitive commodity prices seems to have touched bottom, temporarily at least, about the first of June. At that time it reached a low of 130.1. Last Friday it had recovered to 140.8, a rise of 10.7 points, or a little more than 8 per cent. Reports on the inventory position of the consumption goods industries have been generally encouraging, with textile orders, for example, showing a very vigorous expansion. Textiles are not only a good cross-section of the consumption goods industries, but a very important factor in the employment situation.

Business Improvement.

Last week, moreover, for the first time since early March the general business index of the New York Herald Tribune turned upward. There is no assurance, of course, that this rise (from 55.7 to 55.9) will prove more than a temporary change of direction. However, with the fall buying season approaching there is perhaps better reason to believe that this upturn will hold than was the case in March.

2. The adjournment of Congress. This brought hope of a fairly long breathing space, so far as new legislation is concerned. Incidentally, this hope was substantially increased by the President on Friday night, when, in the course of his radio address, he indicated that only an emergency would induce him to call Congress in special session.

3. The launching of the Government's spending program. Whatever the financial community may think of spending as a solution of the fundamental problem of long-term unemployment, it has, of course, no illusions concerning its potentialities as an immediate temporary stimulus to buying.

4. Certain technical aspects of the market. For one thing, the wave of new buying found the market with a fairly large short interest, and there was a good deal of hasty covering, in the opinion of some, an additional incentive to such covering was the announcement that the stock exchange was preparing to make public the short position, not merely in its aggregate, but individual stocks.

5. Finally, the expansionist credit policies of the Administration have begun to make themselves felt, and bank deposits, which have been rising steadily, are now not far under their high of 1936.

The considerations enumerated above, it should be emphasized, are a summary of the more important items that presumably figured in reversing sentiment in the market last week. They are by no means to be considered a complete picture of the business situation as it shapes up in its entirety. Such a picture would have to include a number of considerations that are distinctly less encouraging.

Paper Joins Industrial Trek To New South, Babson Says

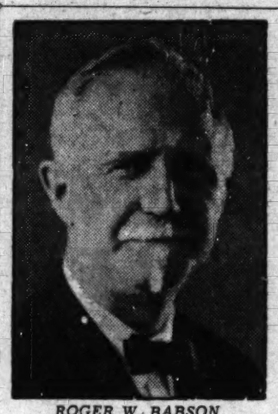
By Roger W. Babson.

Chicago, June 26.—A new industry is being born in the South. At Lufkin, Tex., next month the ground will be broken for a newsprint mill. This will be the first mill making newsprint from Southern pine. Its effect will be far-reaching. It will be another step in the industrialization of the new South. Low costs in the South will force northern newsprint makers to follow the trek of the textile mills toward the gulf. Fast-growing southern pine will become a new major crop, possibly as important in the years to come as cotton is today. This is a significant event.



ROGER W. BABSON.

The South's great problem, even before the Civil War, was its one-crop economy. Cotton was king. When cotton prices were high or crops good, the South prospered. When cotton prices were low or crops failed, there were hard times below the Mason-Dixon Line. Southern editors and statesmen have patiently worked for decades teaching the lesson of farm diversification. Great progress has been made, particularly during the last 15 years, in the rounding-out of Southern agriculture. Here in the Middlewest, farm people are already alarmed by the inroads. Southern corn, beef, truck crops, and dairy products are making in their markets.

Southward Trend.

Meanwhile, there has been tremendous industrial progress. A big labor supply, the proximity to the cotton fields, good water power, combined with union troubles in the North, long ago forced New England textile mills to move to the Piedmont section of the Carolinas and Georgia. In more recent years, however, the migration of Northern industries has broadened. From the Northwestern and Middlewestern States, other businesses have pulled up stakes and moved toward the Gulf. Today the South is not only the cotton-textile center of the country but it has growing interests in iron and steel, in pottery, in clothing, in chemicals, and in kraft paper.

The discovery of the great oil fields of Texas, Oklahoma, and Louisiana gave the South another hypodermic. With petroleum came a myriad of by-product industries and service businesses. The fast-growing sections of the United States today are in the oil regions of the South and southeast. Furthermore, during the last decade the South has vigorously advertised its advantages as a vacation land. Hundreds of thousands of people now make an annual pilgrimage to Florida and the Gulf Coast, to Texas and Arkansas, to New Mexico and Arizona. The resort business has become a thriving industry.

Cotton Crisis.

While all these changes have been going on, cotton has still remained king. During the last five years our huge export markets for cotton have been steadily dwindling. Each season the world takes less of our crop than it did the previous year. At the same time, Brazil, Egypt, and North China have become important cotton growers. Moreover, the Sino-Japanese war means that we will eventually lose another major customer—Japan. Yet, while our oversea markets are becoming smaller, our crops are becoming larger. Our 1937 cotton pick was the largest in all history!

Neither the Department of Agriculture nor the New Deal can guarantee prices if the South raises more cotton each year than this country, or the world, wants. Therefore, cotton acreage must be used for other products. This means the loss of jobs and livelihood for hundreds of thousands of field-hands and share-croppers. To add to the cotton crisis, mechanical cotton-pickers are going into use on more plantations each year. This means even less jobs for field-hands. Hence, not only must new uses be found for cotton lands, but new employment must be provided for cotton workers.

In the last few years, more and more attention has been focussed on the huge slash pine forests of Dixie. The Southern pine reaches maturity in about 15 years—twice as fast as the slow-growing Northern softwoods. Because of this rapid growth of the Southern pine good forestry methods produce real results. Hence foresters have been intensely interested in finding new uses for the pine. The question has been, Could not this Southern pine be used for newsprint? If so, there would be a tremendous market. Last year, newspapers used nearly 4,000,000 tons of newsprint, about 80 per cent of which comes from the spruce of Canada.

It is a long way from northern Ontario to southern Texas. Costs of transportation are high. Southern newspaper publishers have insisted that slash pine could be developed into newsprint. Dr. Charles H. Herty, noted Georgia chemist, has been experimenting for years. At last, the end of the road is in sight. At Lufkin, Tex., about 60 miles from the western border of Louisiana, the ground will soon be broken for the first Southern newsprint mill. As times goes on, I believe the newsprint industry will be a major factor in the growth of Dixie. Pine will some day take its place beside cotton, corn and citrus as one of the major crops of the South.

More to Follow.

With the cotton problem becoming more critical each year, the success of this new industry will be a great boon for the South. Moreover, I believe that newsprint will decoy other industries southward. More chemical concerns will journey gulfward. Rayon mills and automobile accessory companies will be the next in line. Modern roads, splendid transportation facilities, a good low-priced labor supply, a warm climate, rich natural resources and progressive leaders mean that the center of industry will continue to drift South for many years to come. The South is an empire in itself—young, vigorous, growing. To the thousands and thousands of young people who have just graduated from schools and colleges, my advice is "Go South!"

Heavy Buying By Japan Lifts Commodities

Purchases of Cotton, Wood Pulp Will Be Important, Says Mitsui Agent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Heavy Japanese buying, which has been a reported factor in some rising commodity prices during the past ten days, will continue for months to come on an expanding basis, Japanese sources said here today.

In at least two major American commodity fields, cotton and wood pulp, and possibly in others, the new purchasing policy may be an important factor in American markets, Hatsujiro Yoshida, manager of Mitsui & Co., merchant bankers and largest Japanese importing firm, predicted in commentnig on information gathered by Toyoji Inouye, commercial secretary of the Japanese Embassy here.

Japan for many years was No. 1 cotton customer of the United States. Last July, however, drastic curtailment of foreign exchange and import permits by the Japanese government, sharply cut the nation's cotton purchases, approximately 25 per cent, according to Yoshida. For the next 12 months, Japanese purchases of American cotton may be expected to exceed by 33 per cent the total of the past 12 months, he said.

The newly instituted international trade policy of Seihin Ikeda, who on May 26 assumed the portfolios of finance and of commerce and industry in the Japanese cabinet, is responsible for the increased buying, Yoshida said

Ikeda's plan, he explained, is to provide for the utmost possible foreign trade by permitting purchases for re-export after fabrication, as a means of maintaining Japan's credit position, despite the unprecedented financial burden of conducting its Chinese military operations. Yoshida added:

"I would like to say one reassuring thing to American exporters and American investors in Japanese obligations. Japan has never defaulted on a foreign obligation. The present program is a conservatively planned one, designed to make it possible for us, through continued and expanded foreign trade, to meet our foreign obligations punctually as they mature, and to maintain our credit and foreign exchange on a sound basis with those of other nations."

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

Prophecy Department:

Number one. Something pretty thrillingly new in entertainment will be broken out sometime in August by one of our best-liked cocktail rooms.

Number two. A dance-dine rendezvous out in the countryside is to be renamed, refurbished, landscaped and opened under new management. We'll be able to give details in a coupla days.

Boulevard Farms, now under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Roth, boasts a new band and a new cook. The band is "Red" Pyle's swing-it-sweet outfit. The cook is "Mary" (namesake). We understand her fried chicken is delish, her biscuits sensational. Floor shows on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays under the direction of Ted Bucola.

That tricky word, "international" really applies to dancers Stafford and Louise who open on the Shoreham Terrace this evening. They come fresh from the Hotel Copacabanca Palace of Rio de Janeiro, and are booked to open at the Savoy in London on August 15. When in Washington before they appeared at the Capitol and Earle Theaters. The Gaylene Sisters are held over. New on the Terrace will be the Kelo Brothers who dance acrobatically and are funny, too.

Lotus and Bamboo Gardens are mulling over their new floor show plans as we write. There'll probably be a hold-over or two at the Lotus and an entirely new line-up at Bamboo Gardens.

From Monday through Thursday Hamilton's Rainbow Room will be closed for redecoration. Friday night at 9:30 the doors will be thrown open upon the newly gilded Rainbow, designed by Charles Zeller, who also did Annapolis' Anchor Room. There'll be dancing until 2 a. m. Milton Davis will fly to Manhatian to get the newest music for the event.

Bedtime Stories

A Queer Dispute.

Avoid disputes unless you know
That what you say is really so.
—Old Mother Nature.

Avoid disputes anyway. They are the shortest way to trouble. But if you feel that you must enter a dispute be sure that you know, not merely think, a thing is thus or so.

Fiddler the Cricket had said that his ears were in his elbows and Peter Rabbit had frankly and most impolitely stated that he didn't believe a word of it. "Ears are on people's heads. I thought everybody knew that," said Peter. "An elbow would be a mighty funny place to have an ear, I must say."

"No such thing," declared Fiddler, with spirit. "It is a proper place for an ear. What any one wants ears sticking up on his head for is beyond me. A head is a funny place for ears, if you ask me."

"You mean it is the natural and proper place for ears," retorted Peter. "If it is true that your ears are in your elbows then you are queer. The idea of expecting me to believe that your hear with your elbows! The very idea!"

Peter looked closely and nodded. "I see it. What of it?" replied Peter.

"It is one of my ears," replied Fiddler. "And here is the other," he added, holding up the other front leg.

"Then if you should lose your front legs you would lose your ears too," said Peter "Just so," agreed Fiddler.

"Who?" demanded Peter.

"Katydid," snapped Fiddler triumphantly.

Again Peter opened his mouth to say he didn't believe it, but thought better of it. Just in time he remembered that he knew less about Katydid than about Fiddler, and he was learning that he knew little enough about the latter.

Plop! Locust the Grasshopper had landed at Peter's feet, coming so unexpectedly that Peter was startled. "Did I hear my cousin mentioned just now?" inquired Locust.

"If you mean Katydid you heard correctly," replied Fiddler the Cricket, "I was saying that Katydid's ears are you in the elbows."

"You were telling the truth," replied Locust the Grasshopper.

"That's what I think," replied Locust. "I'm glad that mine are not in my elbows."

"I should think you would be. The head is the only place for ears," said Peter.

"Who says so? It doesn't matter. Whoever says so is altogether wrong.

I wouldn't want my ears in my head any more than in my elbows," asserted Locust.

Peter started at the grasshopper long and hard, but he saw nothing that looked like ears. "If your ears are not in your elbow and not in your head, for goodness sake where are they?" he asked at length.

"Where ears ought to be, on my body," replied Locust.

"On your body!" cried Peter "Whoever heard of such a thing? Whereabouts on your body are your ears?"

Locust lifted his wings. "There they are up on that first joint of my body, one on each side," said he.

Peter looked, but saw nothing but two little disks that didn't look to him at all like ears. However, that is what they were, for it is believed that it is by means of these disks that a grasshopper hears.

Peter started for the dear Old Briar-patch. "The head is the only proper place for ears," he obstinately insisted, talking to himself.

$1,500,000,000 Silver Will Go to West Point

By the United Press.

Military Reservation, as the second phase of the program to put the Nation's huge unused monetary stocks under Army protection.

The Timid Soul.

PROBABLY FLYING RIGHT INTO THE FACE OF PROVIDENCE
MR. MILQUETOAST ONCE LIGHTED THREE CIGARETTES WITH ONE MATCH TO PROVE HIS COURAGE

Bob Burns Says—

Men are usually crude, blunt and matter-of-fact and it's all right as long as they're dealing with other men. But I honestly think they should take a course in art and culture, just so they'll be able to understand the finer and more sensitive qualities of the women folks.

I know a newly married man who sat down to his wife's first breakfast and when she called his attention to how pretty the table was, fixed with flowers she had gone out to gather herself, he said, "Yes, the table looks mighty pretty, but where's the coffee?" She says, "Oh, you're so unappreciative—I can't think of everything."

Hundreds See Dignitaries at St. Agnes' Rites

The plans for the new rectory, located at 4909 North Twentieth street, were prepared by Charles W. Kock and erected by Thomas L. Miller, of Arlington County, at a cost of $10,000.

The Rev. E. W. Johnson, first pastor of St. Agnes' Church, was formerly assistant pastor at St. Charles' Church in Clarendon. During the World War he was sent to Newport News and was active in many Army camps. He returned to the county in 1938 to take the pastorate of St. Agnes' Church.

I. Chance Buchanan has been named president of the Arlington County Safety Congress, which completed its organization plans at a recent meeting held at Cherrydale.

The following vice presidents were named: Arthur H. Surprise, C. E. Stoneburner, E. B. Chapman, and H. L. Marshall. Mrs. Charles H. Mann is the secretary.

The vice presidents will serve as a committee to nominate a 15-member safety council. The committee will meet tomorrow night at the Cherrydale firehouse to draft its report to be made on July 7.

County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, and County Engineer C. L. Kinnier go to Richmond today for a conference with members of the State highway department.

Hanrahan said the question of improving State roads within Arlington County will be the principal matter taken up with the State officials.

Installation of newly elected officers will feature the meeting of Arlington Chapter Women of the Moose tonight in Lyon Park Community House. The ceremonies will be conducted by Columbia Chapter of the District of Columbia.

Those who will be installed are Mrs. Myrtle Melnick, past regent; Mrs. Ada Wolff, senior regent; Mrs. Maudena Cardwell, junior regent; Mrs. Kathryn Goodwin, chaplain; Mrs. Joseph Messner, recorder; Mrs. Eunice Matthews, treasurer.

The Auxiliary of John Lyon Post, No. 3150, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will participate in the jubilee celebration planned by the auxiliaries of all posts to extend through 1939.

An Author Sits at His Hero's Desk

When Clyde Brion Davis (center), dropped into The Post news room last night to see some old friends, they took his picture seated "on the rim" of a copy desk where Homer Zigler, principal character in Davis' book, "The Great American Novel," ended his newspaper career. Davis' story, now printing more than 135,000 volumes, was a book-of-the-month selection for June. It was Davis' second novel, and his second to make "book of the month" with Farrar and Rinehart. His first, "The Anointed," was published last fall. Davis has been legman, reporter, rewrite, deskman, slot man and news editor with newspapers in Denver, Buffalo, San Francisco and Seattle. His "Great American Novel" is the story of Homer Zigler, a newspaperman who wanted to write the great American novel and never quite got around to it. Davis next book is scheduled for publication in early winter. Pictured with the author, clockwise, are Allen Grobin, Arthur Branscombe, Ben Thirkield, Gerald Breckenridge, also a novelist, and Pye Chamberlayne.

Man Is Dizzied By Flight, Walks Into Propeller

Airplanes on the ground are bad medicine for Linwood B. McCloud, 32, Bureau of Public Roads engineer.

McCloud, who lives at 117 Hilltop Terrace, George Washington Park, Va., went flying yesterday in a plane owned by Robert Ashburn, of Alexandria and piloted by Ed Anders, of Washington. When the ship landed at Beacon Field after the flight, McCloud had been made dizzy by the experience. Unsure of his bearings, he walked into the still revolving propeller.

Last night he was in Alexandria Hospital where Dr. Samuel B. Moore patched up his left arm, broken in five places.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 26.—Maryland Democrats grappled vaguely today for something solid to lean on and consider their strange senatorial campaign—heralded as a clear-cut fight on national issues and suddenly befogged at its very start.

Officially, the "New Deal vs. Old Deal" contest opened last night in Cumberland, where Representative David J. Lewis, a native son labelled as a candidate with White House blessing, fired the first gun in his attempt to unseat Senator Millard E. Tydings, frequent and outspoken New Deal foe.

The fog blew up when, at Havre de Grace, miles from Cumberland, Senator Tydings' campaign manager virtually echoed some of the New Deal praise Lewis was voicing in his anti-Tydings address.

Lewis, after an assertion his candidacy was determined by the "sight of so many Tory Republicans declaring" for Tydings, expressed belief the Roosevelt administration was "more conservative than the Old Deal."

At Havre de Grace, in his first appearance as chief strategist in the Tydings camp, Senator George L. Radcliffe told members of the Harford County Women's Democratic Club that President Roosevelt was "conservative yet liberal" and was a man of "ability, vision and force."

Radcliffe, a personal friend of the President and a supporter of New Deal legislation, made no mention of the Lewis-Tydings contest, but asserted the President was one of the four outstanding Presidents since the Civil War—the other three being Theodore Roosevelt, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson.

The addresses of Lewis and Radcliffe, following close on the big surprise occasioned by announcement of the latter as Tydings' campaign manager, kept the spotlight off the gubernatorial race, to which the week-end added two developments and promised a third.

In Atlantic City, where the State Bar Association convention was held, political discussions centered about reports Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, a gubernatorial candidate, would name a Western Marylander on his ticket to succeed himself.

State Senate President Lansdale G. Sasscer, a third Democratic candidate for the governorship, offered a resolution at a convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars here seeking more jobs for men over 45. Such men, Sasscer said, should have preference on public works projects.

No Jewels in Her Crown

When Miss Betty Gray, of Washington, D. C., is crowned queen of the Berkeley Spring, W. Va., Tomato Festival there will be no jewels in her crown. Instead of the regal costumes usually found at coronations, Miss Gray will don an old straw hat and overalls for the ceremony, scheduled from September 3 to 5. Although she knows nothing about tomatoes, planting or canning, Miss Gray was selected over contestants from agricultural sections.

Fishing on York, Virginian Drowns

Richmond, Va., June 26 (AP).—A week-end holiday ended abruptly for six young Richmonders on the York River in James City County last night when Frank Tyler, 32, fell from their fishing boat and was drowned.

Fredericksburg Plans To Enlarge Water Plant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 26.—City Manager L. J. Houston, jr., said yesterday he expected to begin working at once on plans for enlarging the filter plant and adding new equipment as the result of the city receiving a PWA grant of $50,850.

The grant will supplement $60,000 in bonds issued last year. The total cost of the waterworks improvements is estimated at $115,000.

Japanese Beetle Fight Opens in Cecil County

Elkton, Md., June 26 (AP).—Cecil County became today the focal point for an offensive against the scourge of Japanese beetles which last year caused a 50 per cent crop loss in the county.

Scientific warfare and the introduction of mercenaries—Japanese wasps—to rid hard-hit Maryland farms from the pest, has been perfected by University of Maryland entomologists with the hope that the war of extermination will be won in eight or ten years.

Gettysburg Prepared To Receive Veterans
